FIND FRENCH FLYERS
SAFE IN MANCHURIA
BRIEF REPORTS SAY

Costes and Bellonte May Have Broken Distance Record

PARIS, Oct. 5. — Captain Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonte, famous French airmen given up for lost in a sensational attempt to shatter all non-stop distance flight records, landed at Kowchinza, a tiny village near Tsitsihar, Manchuria, a dispatch from Harbin revealed today.

If the dispatch is true and the fliers safe, it means that they have broken the existing distance record by more than 400 miles.

In addition to the dispatch from Tsitsihar, the French air ministry has received an unofficial communication in which the fliers were quoted as saying they landed at 3 p. m. yesterday.

There obviously is some miscommunication in time, or else the landing in Manchuria was not made after a direct non-stop flight from Paris. The airmen took off from Le Bourget air field a week ago yesterday, and on the following Sunday were reported sighted some distance from Irkutsk, Siberia.

There is a possibility the message was sent by the fliers some days ago and was badly delayed in transmission. Their plane, the "Question Mark" was not equipped from the point of view of fuel supply to remain in the air for a week at a stretch.

The air ministry confessed itself unable to understand the message, and took immediate steps to verify it.

Costes and Bellonte failed in an attempt to fly the Atlantic several months ago, turning back to France when caught in a violent storm over the Azores. Both are well-known war aces.

LAUNCH FIRST AIR
MAIL TO ARGENTINE

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 5.—The first regular air mail between the United States and Buenos Aires departed here today. The flight will follow the canal zone route and then will take the west coast of South America to Santiago, Chile. From there it will cross the Andes to the Argentine capital.

The schedule provides only eight days, as compared with thirty-five by steamer.

The northbound service will start October 12.

In flying over the Andes the planes will have to attain an altitude of more than 17,000 feet.

EXPECT ARMORY TO WAIT UNTIL SPRING

Actual construction work on Xenia's new $50,000 state armory which will be erected on a triangular site purchased by the city in the Dodds Addition, will probably not start until early next spring, in the opinion of city officials.

A $5,000 bond issue to finance purchase of the tract was authorized by City Commission and the deeds to the twelve plat lots which comprise the desired tract were recently turned over to the state.

Since that time there have been no new developments on the armory situation, the next step being for the state architect to prepare plans and specifications for the building. City officials believe that the state will await favorable weather next year before commencing construction work.

HELD FOR IRRONTON

George Smith, wanted at Ironton, O., on a charge of abandoning two minor children, was arrested by L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, Friday night three miles north of Osborn, where he had been making his home. A warrant for his arrest was received at the sheriff's office from the prosecuting attorney at Ironton. Smith is being held in the County Jail, pending the arrival of Ironton officials, who will return him to that city for prosecution.

STATE OF COLORADO
LAUNCHES PROBE OF
BLOODY PENAL RIOT

Death List Twelve;
Leader Killed Companions

CANON CITY, Colo., Oct. 5.—A pall of sadness and even traces of terror still hung over this city today with the passing excitement and horror over the brutal slaying of guards and convicts during an orgy of bloodshed unprecedented in the history of western penal institutions.

The death toll of the bloody state penitentiary riot stood at twelve—seven guards and five convicts; a score were suffering from wounds and injuries sustained during the seventeen hour riot precipitated by Danny Daniels, arch-slayer, in his desperate attempt to escape, along with four other convict companions.

It was definitely established today that Daniels caused eleven of the twelve deaths. Three guards were killed in the early rioting and Daniels mercilessly slew four other guards, shooting them down in cold blood within the prison walls. He then sent a "mercy" shot into Jimmy Pardue, co-conspirator, who had been injured; shot down three of his other followers, and then committed suicide to end the bloody siege on the "tomb of living men."

Work of reconstructing the battered buildings of the state prison was begun here today with the state of Colorado opening an investigation into the cause of the convict mutiny.

Gov. William Adams is expected to come from Denver and, following a conference with Warden Francis Crawford, will launch an investigation which will result in the death penalty for any convict found guilty of participation in the bloodiest battle in the history of American penal institutions.

The board of corrections, governing body of the institution, met last night and Warden Crawford presented the results of his investigation thus far.

Property damage to the various buildings has been estimated at $300,000. Four buildings were destroyed by flames, the dining hall, cell houses 1 and 2 and the chapel. Warden Crawford declared that he will put the convicts to work at once reconstructing the buildings to provide shelters for the inmates.

At present the 900 convicts are housed in emergency tents within the institution's walls and are guarded by a detail of militiamen.

Reconstruction of the scene in the "execution room" of cell house No. 2 by prison officials shows that Danny Daniels, ring leader of the rioting convicts, killed five of his companions and then shot himself dead.

The convicts did not commit suicide, as it was first reported. From this Daniels is charged with having engineered nine deaths, four guards and five convicts.

Several mysteries in connection with the outbreak will take weeks to solve, it was indicated by officials. One of these centers about the disappearance of the weapons used by the convicts before the mutiny ended with the deaths of five rioters.

The prisoners had several revolvers and about 1,000 rounds of ammunition stored in the various cell houses, according to Joseph Shiloh, steward of the penitentiary, who was a prisoner of Daniels and James Pardue for several hours during the massacre.

Plans for the riot had been carefully laid and fostered by the convicts over a period of several months, according to Warden Crawford.

"The killers undoubtedly had aid from the outside and had been planning for this break for weeks and possibly months. Every bit of evidence we have points to a scheme which has been in the process of development for a long time," the warden said.

"We felt, of course, that we adopted the only policy open to us under the circumstances. Out of hand, a half dozen desperate criminals cowed and terrorized the rest and delivered to the prison authorities an ultimatum threatening the murder of valued guards."

IDENTIFY DEAD MAN
FOUND ALONG RAILS
NEAR XENIA FRIDAY

Omer Whetstone, Dayton, Committed Suicide
Says Coroner

The beheaded body of a man found along the right-of-way of the Pennsylvania Railroad, two miles east of Xenia, by a section crew at 6 a. m. Friday, was identified late Friday afternoon as Omer Whetstone, 44, 111 Montana Ave., Dayton, painter.

Partial identification was made by Fred O. Lieurance, Pennsylvania Railroad detective, who viewed the remains at the scene and recognized the man as a stranger he had caught loitering in the railroad yards east of the Columbus St. crossing at 3 a. m. Thursday and who gave that name and address when booked at Police Headquarters for the remainder of the night on a vagrancy charge.

Abandoning a previous theory that the man apparently had been run down by a train while walking along the tracks, Dr. F. M. Chambliss, county coroner, who viewed the case, as coroner, was called to the scene Friday and made an unsuccessful attempt to end his life at Dayton two weeks ago by slaying his throat.

Coroner Chambliss learned that Whetstone was only released last Monday from Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, where he had been recuperating from the suicide attempt and is of the opinion that the man deliberately laid his head on the rails and waited calmly for a train to pass sometime Thursday night. He had carefully removed everything from his clothes that would serve to identify him.

Identity was definitely established Friday night by Charles McKay, Dayton, an acquaintance, who came to Xenia and viewed the body.

Previously Coroner Chambliss had been in communication with the business manager of the Dayton Painter's Union, ever since the description of the dead man was given in every respect with that of Whetstone. McKay said he had known Whetstone for years and that they had grown up together at Greenville.

Authorities believe Whetstone was demented and that when taken into custody by the detective on the preceding evening he was wandering in the railroad yards awaiting an opportunity to make a second attempt to end his life.

The second suicide effort was postponed for a day when he was locked up at Police Headquarters. He was released, however, the next morning.

A sister, Mrs. Bertha Little, Middletown, O., was notified and will come to Xenia Saturday to make funeral arrangements. A step father, Frank Hathaway, also survives.

SUBMITS TO SECOND
SURGERY IN BERLIN
FOR APPENDICITIS

Former Polly Lauder
Passes Ordeal Successfully

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Mrs. James J. (Gene) Tunney, wife of the former heavy-weight champion of the world, underwent an operation for appendicitis here today. The operation was entirely successful.

The operation was performed at the clinic of Professor A. W. Meyer, the famous German surgeon who saved Mrs. Tunney's life when she was close to death from an abdominal abscess on Brioni Island in the Adriatic this spring.

Mrs. Tunney, the former Polly Lauder, Greenwich, Conn., heiress was taken to the clinic by her husband yesterday. There was no emergency but an operation was deemed advisable.

Tunney left his wife at the clinic last night and returned to his apartments in the Hotel Esplanade. He was still at the hotel when reached by International News Service on the telephone at 9 o'clock this morning, and was unaware that Dr. Meyer had already begun the operation.

"You certainly caught me this time," the elusive ex-champion said. "I was just going to call the clinic to find out about it."

Tunney at first refused to confirm or deny that the operation had been decided upon, but finally added:

"The Tunneys arrived here early this week from France, and immediately called to see Dr. Meyer. The visit gave rise to erroneous reports that Tunney himself had to undergo an operation. But this was ridiculed both by the surgeon and the fighter himself."

Through his secretary, Tunney later gave to the International News Service details of the operation.

"The operation lasted half an hour and was a full success," the ex-fighter said. "Mrs. Tunney's appendix was removed because of its condition due to the abscess."

"The operation proceeded normally, and there were no complications whatever. Things turned out exactly as Professor Meyer predicted when he operated on Mrs. Tunney at Brioni."

"My absence during the operation was more or less according to plan. Dr. Meyer wishing to spare me too much excitement, Mrs. Tunney behaved most bravely, I am told."

Tunney proceeded to the clinic as soon as he was informed the operation had taken place, but he will not be able to see his wife for some little while.

DIVORCE POLITICS
FROM TARIFF BODY
WITH COMPROMISE

Order Commission To Act Judicially On All Claims

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Under an armistice in which compromise was again substituted for partisan warfare, the senate had moved today to take the U. S. tariff commission out of politics by proclaiming it a non-partisan, judicial, fact-finding agency for administration of the tariff law.

The commission, if it follows the instructions laid down by the senate, will "act judicially" at all times and ignore all "partisanship and party policy" in its recommendations. This compromise, by which the present membership of three Republicans and three Democrats is retained, was adopted without a record vote. It marked the settlement of another heated tariff dispute by amicable means and served to emphasize the lament of Republican leaders that President Hoover entered the flexible-tariff controversy only to go down to defeat.

The senate finance committee meanwhile forwarded to the treasury department another list of 400 industrial mercantile and importing concerns for reports on their "financial records" during the last seven years. The Republican membership sponsored 282 names, topped by the great mercantile houses of Sears, Roebuck and Co., John Wanamaker, Saks and Co., Houbigant, Inc., Lord and Taylor, Alfred Dunhill, Inc., Gimbel Bros., R. H. Macy and Co., F. W. Woolworth Co., Marshall Field and Co., Montgomery Ward and Co., S. S. Kresge Co., and the Gruen Watchmakers Guild.

JUDGE MUST FIX BLAME FOR FIRING FIRST IN STRIKE WAR

MARION, N. C., Oct. 5.—Sitting as a magistrate in the Marion strike probe, Superior Court Judge Thomas J. Harding today delivered further into riddle of whether officers or strikers fired the first shots in the pitched battle between mill workers and the sheriff's force here that claimed a total of five lives.

As the massive hearing entered its second day, indications were that it will last into next week. A great amount of testimony cannot be heard today as the court will take a recess at noon until Monday. The hearing involved Sheriff O. D. Adkins and eighteen of his deputies who are under $2,000 bond each on charges of murder growing out of the killing of the five strikers.

Along with them are being heard the cases of forty-odd strikers of the Marion Manufacturing Company, held on lesser bonds of $500 each and charged with rioting and rebellion. A number of eye-witnesses, including a newspaper reporter, have testified thus far that the first fusillade in the gun battle was fired by the officers. The officers, however, contend that the other side opened fire first.

DEFENSE FAILS TO IMPEACH
WITNESS AGAINST PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—After a lengthy defense attack upon her story of what took place in the reception room of the Pantages Theater last August, the testimony of Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old cooed with stage aspirations, today stood practically intact. For two hours yesterday afternoon the girl answered questions put to her by attorneys for Alexander Pantages, wealthy theater owner, in an attempt to break down her story of the alleged attack which may result in a fifty-year prison term for the fifty-seven-year-old defendant.

The grilling cross-examination followed the girl's morning testimony in which she voiced her accusations under the direction of District Attorney Byron Fitts.

Several times during the ordeal she was forced to halt, sob a bit, then brush the tears away with a handkerchief.

She testified that Pantages led her into a small office on the mezzanine floor of his theater August 9 to discuss her application for a booking with his vaudeville circuit. Instead of discussing her vaudeville engagement, the girl told the court, Pantages told her of an unhappy domestic life. Then he began to make love to her she asserted.

District Attorney Fitts impersonating Pantages, directed a mock scuffle in which Eunice re-enacted the theater man's alleged advances. The girl said Pantages threw her to the floor and placed his hand over her mouth to keep her from crying out.

RUSSIA WILL SPEND
EIGHT BILLIONS IN INDUSTRY PROGRAM

Announcing Plan To Americanize All
Industry

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—George A. Bryant, Jr., vice president of the Austin Company of Cleveland, O., who returned to the United States from Europe aboard the liner Bengaria announced today that Russia has embarked upon a gigantic program for Americanizing industry. The program covers a five-year period and involves an outlay of $8,000,000,000.

Bryant returned with a $40,000,000 contract to build a huge automobile plant and a model industrial city to be located near Nijni Novgorod and be called Austingrad. It will be designed for the ultimate population of nearly 50,000 people. The automobile plant will be built to produce 100,000 Ford cars and trucks annually, with a final capacity of about 500,000. Preliminary dredging work has already been started and actual construction will commence next spring. The company expects to complete the job within fifteen months.

Bryant sees an extensive market for American skill and machinery in Russia. In building Austingrad modern American construction equipment will be used in addition to from 9,000 to 12,000 Russian laborers. The Austin company will be paid in gold from this country for its work. Bryant declared that his negotiations with the leading figures in the Soviet government had convinced him of their business acumen as well as their honesty.

"Although some classes of people have suffered from the overthrow of the czarist reign, the purchasing power of the people as a whole is better than before the war," said Bryant. "In order to catch up with demand for goods and to increase prosperity Russia hopes to put American mass production into effect. While the government owns most industry, private enterprise is not prohibited."

UNDERSTANDING IS
PURPOSE OF COMING TO UNITED STATES

Accompanies Hoover To Retreat At Camping Lodge

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—An understanding, not an alliance—friendly co-operation, not distrustful rivalry—and a mutual undertaking to compel peace in a war-weary world.

These, in his own words, are the motives that impelled J. Ramsay MacDonald, the prime minister of Great Britain to snatter the traditions of a century and a half by crossing 3,000 miles of ocean in order to sit down, friendly like, with the president of the United States and talk over the problems that contain the germs of international irritation.

Peace, first of all between Great Britain and the United States, but lastly and in its broader concept peace throughout the world, is the objective of MacDonald's visit.

The basis for it, he believes, must first of all be established on the structure of friendship between the English-speaking peoples, and it is to strengthen that structure that he has come to Washington to "talk it out."

Before he leaves the capital, some five days hence, the British premier will have talked over many things with President Hoover and with American officials generally. The conversations will run the scale of Anglo-American and world problems—from navies to trade, from Europe's checked politics to the policies that both countries shall follow in the Far East, which many regard as the theater of "the next war," if there is to be any, next war.

Peace, peace, peace—the sturdy, square-built Scotsman, who rose from that class of people that, always bears the burden of any war, talks of nothing else. If he is steered off into talk of concrete things, it is only in their relation to the broader aspect of peace.

Standing square-shouldered and square-faced before a throng of eager admirers at the embassy last night, the first laborer ever to rise to the prime ministership brushed aside inquiries as to navies and other specific problems, and exclaimed:

"The trouble with the world today is misunderstanding. And the main purpose, the great purpose of my visit to Washington is to try and make misunderstanding impossible."

"Neither your president, I believe, nor myself—I certainly can speak for myself—have any idea of spending much time in discussing details."

"We should like to survey together the large and wide, the high and deep problems of international peace. We have had our experiences in international war. We have all taken risks in the making of war. Isn't it time, my friends, that we should take some risks to secure peace. As long as we think of peace in terms of war, we will never get peace. As soon as we think of international dangers in terms of peace and with the determination to maintain peace, then I have the belief and the hope that we shall maintain peace."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5.—The silent peaks of the Blue Ridge Mountains will close in today upon the peace conferences between President Hoover and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain.

The British premier will accompany his presidential host this afternoon into the fastnesses of the Virginia mountains. At the Hoover wilderness retreat in the Virginia wilderness the American president and the prime minister will talk man-to-man concerning mutual understanding between the two great English-speaking nations.

Mrs. Hoover and the premier's daughter Ishbel MacDonald, whose cheeks are tinted like the red autumn leaves, will accompany the party. What these two hostesses of leading statesmen will talk about may never be known but it is hardly audacious to predict that

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY
MAGNIFY THE LORD—My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour.—Luke 1:46, 47.

MACDONALD'S VISIT

A century and a half after the thirteen colonies declared their independence of Great Britain, a prime minister under the crown from which they absolved themselves of all allegiance is on his way to the United States on what he hopes will be a "fruitful innovation." The fruit that Mr. MacDonald looks forward to gathering on his American anabasis is a better understanding between our country and his, which shall remove causes of friction and thereby promote greater harmony and cordiality in the interest of Anglo-American and world peace.

Walter Hines Page once expressed the wish that the president of the United States and the king of England might stand up side by side and let the world see what they looked like. That is not so easily arranged. The king did the next best thing when he sent this message to Mr. MacDonald, as the latter was leaving London:

"On the eve of your journey, I wish you God-speed. It is a departure that will be surrounded with good wishes for it is a contribution to those happy relations between two great peoples which must be an article of faith among all men of goodwill."

With this royal benediction on his mission, when Mr. MacDonald steps upon American soil he will be both a personal representative of his king and the elective head of a nation whose sympathy with his motives in coming to the United States already has been widely articulated. The innovation that he is creating in a graceful gesture. There is to it, however, a great deal more than that. There is the desire of the head of one government for the time being to meet the head of another government and discuss with him matters of vital import to their two countries; and the conviction that this method of negotiation offers greater promise than the indirect method of diplomatic discussion.

The United States desires to be on terms of amity with all nations. The peculiarly close relations existing between it and Great Britain are the consequences of natural history development. They afford in a community of interests in many directions, a potential basis for complete harmony of action. They unfortunately provide, also, a number of competitive contacts that lend themselves to misunderstanding and bickering.

The purpose of Mr. MacDonald in visiting Mr. Hoover is to promote Anglo-American harmony through understanding. A similar purpose should be the keynote of his reception.

An informal talk with the newspapermen at 10 Downing street is described as an innovation in England. A few more such innovations and the course of true international love may run more smoothly.

It was General Hancock who said the tariff was a local issue. Just now its locality is Washington and no place else and it is doubtful if any one in Washington is interested outside official circles.

The furore created among Boston's intelligentsia by the banning of "Strange Interlude" suggests that even in the Hub there are people who don't know when they are well off.

The excitement aroused in parts of this country by the discovery of "pants burglars" looks as if Eve-less paradises still exist.

NEW YORK.—The thirteenth floor of the Equitable building is in greater demand by tenants than any other tier; yet up town farther, in the Grand Central zone, prejudice against the thirteenth floor is so deeply rooted that 11 of the 15 tallest towers there have eliminated the thirteenth floor entirely. The next elevator number past 12 is 14.

"It isn't that we're superstitious or anything of the kind," said Mary Higgins, the Matrix Mogul. "The thing is, when you're getting a good break out of life there's no percentage in turnin' around an' spittin' in Fortune's eye!"

Eddie Jackson, the famous "one plate still man," whom the pope once complimented by declaring "Yours is the fifth estate!" is my authority for the statement that there is not in existence, in any newspaper "morgue," a photograph of Coolidge and Dawes in which Dawes' world-famed pipe is featured.

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE LETTER OF THE LAW

There has always been much talk about keeping the letter of the law and not its spirit. There is such a thing as being exceedingly exact and precise about certain details and winning a great reputation for achievements which may actually be trifling. Often we hear of a boy or girl who for one year or five years or ten has never been late to school by as much as five minutes or never absent for one day. That is creditable, but it is far less important than an honest striving to master a subject, to learn, to fit oneself for a useful life. Healthy curiosity, leading to the life-long habit of study, is of vastly more account than keeping rules to the very letter. Punctuality is important. No man has a right to be so selfish as to waste another man's time. But to be a few minutes late and have something important to say is better than being on time to the minute and occupying no place in the council other than a chair.

Now and then one reads in the newspapers of a man who has not missed being in church every Sunday for 40 years. Too bad. In order to build such a sensational record he has doubtless neglected many important things that he should have done.

OBSERVATION

We think we go about with our eyes open, but the fact is that the powers of observation of the average person are very poor. Unless we give special attention to concentration we see things only in part, carelessly, and inaccurately. Many things are so commonplace that by habit they are never really within range of our observation. Hardly a man who is reading this paragraph can tell without looking, how many buttons, if any, there are on the sleeve of his coat. If you are in the habit of walking to work each morning you may have walked down the same street scores or even hundreds of times. Can you name the stores and business houses that you pass, in consecutive order?

Again, if you are not bald, you probably have no idea how many hairs you have on your head. It may be interesting to note that a single square inch of scalp contains about 744 hairs. This number multiplied by 120 square inches, the surface of the average head, gives us 89,280 as the number of hairs on the head. Well, well, so much for that.

WORKERS URGED TO AID IN PREVENTING LEAD POISONING

By HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, Public Health Service

(Hugh S. Cummings was born in Virginia in 1869. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and the University College of Medicine, Richmond. In 1894, he was appointed assistant surgeon in the public health service. Since 1920 he has been surgeon general. He is a member of several medical organizations and has written various works and pamphlets on public health.)

The responsibility for the prevention of industrial poisoning rests largely on the manufacturer, but the worker also is responsible. The manufacturer should provide adequate safety appliances and educate employees in their use, but not frequently safety measures and devices provided are ignored or misused by employees.

Lead poisoning is one of the great problems of industrial hygiene. In the early part of the nineteenth century experimental investigations of the action of lead were begun, but it is only during the past 25 years that much progress has been made in methods of preventing lead poisoning. The application of knowledge of how to prevent it, together with improved methods in the handling of poisonous materials, will greatly reduce the incidences of this and other industrial poisonings in the future.

The following are some of the principal industries and trades in which workers are exposed to lead, lead mining and smelting, making white or red lead; the manufacture of paint, storage batteries, glazes, enamel, pottery, and most lead objects; painting of brass founding and polishing cut glass and brass.

In general all of those who handle lead-containing materials, ever such diverse things as putty and window shades, are exposed more or less to lead poisoning.

The state of Maine has had a number of deaths from lead poisoning which were not at all industrial in the ordinary sense of the word. These cases of poisoning were among the people who resided in rural communities and used lead piping to bring spring water to their houses. The lead from the pipes was dissolved and poisoning resulted from using this water. This condition has also been found in many other states.

When a person is exposed to a dangerous amount of lead he usually absorbs it and his system will show evidence of it very early. How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

You have no doubt heard the saying, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." This little comment could never be applied more truthfully than in the 17th and 18th centuries. What glorious names are tied up with these periods—the very late 16th and early 17th centuries. There was Elizabeth, vibrant, dynamic Elizabeth, who encouraged research in beauty. In fact, she is purported to have spent pleasant relaxed hours away from her court duties, devising and creating cosmetics for herself. Her perfumes, concocted just for her, by the most famous of French perfumers, earned for her the title of connoisseur of perfumes.

Then came the most exciting periods of European history, Marie Theresa, Catherine the Great—Barbarina, the court favorite of Frederick the Great—women of beauty and brilliancy of intellect. These were women who shocked the masculine world with their ability to think. Somehow, the men of those days, even as some of our most modern men, were horrified at the idea that normal intelligence could live in the head of a pretty woman. Particularly in such exquisitely beautiful women. Women who spent hours at their dressing table enhancing their beauty with every means at their command. Of Marie Theresa you most likely know—the queen who "wept and took and took" anything that she desired because so few could resist her beauty—Catherine, who always declared, "I am only a woman," the while she ruled with an iron hand. Barbarina, the dancer, who played such a role at Frederick's court at Sansas Souci.

During this period the influence of the French was felt, not only in Europe but in the Colonies, in that wild, terrifying place called "America." Perfumes, elaborate wigs, exotic cosmetics, were the fashion of the day—and I suppose I should whisper this—the men were just as much interested in such feminine foibles as the women themselves, as any Colonial picture well testifies. The men and women actually vied with each other in the brilliancy of their dress, the luxury of their coiffures, as evidenced by the Washington wig.

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—"For safety's sake," once remarked the Automobile Age, of London—than which publication John Bull himself is no more typically British. "English motorists who plan tours abroad will do well to remember that traffic keeps to the wrong side of the road in practically all countries outside our own islands, New Zealand and the Argentine Republic."

Doubtless it will come as a severe shock to the Automobile Age's editor to learn that now Argentine traffic also has flopped to the "wrong side"—that is to say, to the right, like most of the rest of us.

Senator Tasker L. Oddie, of Nebraska, who, just back from the recent Pan-American roads conference at Rio de Janeiro, brings news of Argentine's revolutionary departure from age-old precedent, speaks of it as a mighty significant development in the relationship among the Americans—from the standpoint of communications, at any rate.

Moreover, the senator is absolutely correct about it.

A country's decision to switch its traffic from the left to the right side of all its highways may not seem at first thought, to be a matter of much international consequence.

The truth is that it involves considerable trouble; and the fact that Argentina is willing to make the best of it bespeaks a desire to acquire in majority custom, which perhaps means more than the republic's endorsement of some political treaty of plenty of recognized importance.

It is a long time now since North American interests have been concerning themselves in Latin American road building. I myself can recall a number of

at times harder to overcome than the acute condition,

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Turkish Baths as Reducers
"Dear Doctor Lulu: Five years ago I was 30 pounds overweight, and had tried reducing records, rubber corsets and such, with no result except getting stouter! Then, one day, someone told me of your book, 'Diet and Health.' With Key to the Calories'—out to be! Had it not been for the book I should still be lating myself every time I looked in a mirror. At the same time I heard of a place where they gave good Turkish baths, and I took the exercises you advised in your book, and counted my calories most faithfully. In four months I was down to my normal weight and felt better than I had in years."

"I found this out: The sweating bath does not help unless one diet. There were a number of women taking them who were still trying to reduce after I was normal weight, simply because they would not diet."

"By counting my calories I remained at normal for four years, and then, I am ashamed to say, through carelessness I gained back 20 pounds in less than a year. So, once more, I am dieting. Have taken off 10 pounds in the last three weeks, and believe me, I'm going to keep them off this time!"

Thank you, N., for letting us know your good results. I believe Turkish baths or other sweating baths are beneficial, once or twice a week, for the general health; but they will not reduce you (nor will exercise, unless enough is taken to use up excess food and some of your stored fat as well). I believe they help some to speed up the metabolism so the food burns a little more briskly, but the help is never enough to cause a reduction unless dieting is combined with them.

I love my Turkish baths and try to have one at least once a week. I go incognito and frequently hear L. H. P., and age methods discussed by the F. F. F. (Friendly Fat Fraternity) who are always present. Not infrequently some woman faints from staying in the hot room too long. One should never stay in after the heart begins to thump. Nor should sufferers of Bright's disease, heart disease or hardening of the arteries attend them, except on the advice of their physicians.

To get the best effect, liberal amounts of water should be drunk. The scales may not register any loss if you do this, but more perspiration is induced, and the body tissues are better flushed. (The weight that is lost is immediately gained, anyway, after drinking.) You have shown, N., that unless the physical activities are increased one has to continue to watch the weight. It is best never to allow a gain of more than five pounds before dieting again.

The instructions given in my book are condensed in our reducing pamphlet. See column rules for obtaining this. Better also ask for the Tummy Ten exercises.

Living and Loving
By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young married woman; have been married for seven years. My husband is in bad health and, really, I think drinking caused a greater part of it. He is very selfish and never tries to make it pleasant for me."

"Sometime ago I met a man in another city who seems to like me very much and insists on writing to me. I believe I love my husband more than any one, but I have so little pleasure in life I think a little is due me. Should I answer when I receive a letter?"

"He is the type of man I always admired, but then I think of my little selfish hubby and think I must go through with it. My friends say I am wasting my health and happiness. I have been told he couldn't live more than two years at best."

"Please don't think I am one to cast aside one on account of bad health. If so I wouldn't have waited this long. It's just bad nerves, I guess."

"GRETITA." Whatever I advise, Gretita, I can see you have made up your mind to stand by your "little selfish hubby." You haven't it in you to leave him while he needs you. As to corresponding with this other man, there is no reason why you shouldn't. Even if your husband objects you can point out that he has no right to. But I doubt if you will. If the poor little man only has two years to live you will want to make those two years as happy as possible, and your own pleasure is, after all, not very important. Pleasure does not necessarily mean happiness.

And you are the type that will only be happy when you know you are doing what seems to you to be right, and it will not seem right to you to correspond with one man if you are married to another. Am I right? You would, I know, I can see it in your letter, but you will carry on as long as this selfish little man depends on you. Later, I hope so much, that you may have real pleasure and happiness. He may get well, you know, and then if he remains selfish and inconsiderate, you can decide whether you still love him and want to stick.

"Dear Virginia Lee: My very best girl chum has been going with a boy for a year. She loves him with all her heart, but he doesn't like her any more and she knows it. This is just breaking her heart. He has asked me for different dates. One night I went. The next time I saw her I apologized. This she never entirely got over. Now he keeps asking for dates and I never go, just on her account."

"Lately she won't even look at me because she thinks I look him away from her. But I didn't. I don't even want him if he still loves her. I have always loved him. What am I to do? BLUE EYED SUSAN."

CAPTAIN YOWELL IS OFFENSIVE STAR IN ATTACK OF WINNERS

Brilliant Fifty Yard Touchdown Dash Is Feature

Demonstrating superiority in every department of play, an up and coming O. S. and S. O. Home football eleven registered an impressive 12 to 0 victory over Holy Angels High School of Sidney Friday afternoon on the local gridiron.

Both teams spent the first quarter in feeling each other out but in the second period Captain Bob Yowell, halfback, caught a punt and, eluding the entire visiting team, raced fifty yards for the initial touchdown.

The second touchdown came in the third quarter and was also accounted for by Captain Yowell. On a deceptive formation Yowell broke through the line for a fifty-yard run and a score.

On several other occasions the Home team approached within striking distance of the goal but lost the ball on downs and in the fourth stanza Prof. Seall's eleven lost a third touchdown because of holding which resulted in a fifteen-yard penalty.

The Home eleven recorded nineteen first downs against three for the visitors and appeared in much better physical condition than the visiting team, which was forced to make frequent substitutions. The Home gridders, playing their first game since losing to Xenia Central High 7 to 0 in the season's opener, showed marked improvement both in offense and defense. Plays were run off smoothly.

Although Captain Yowell was without a doubt the offense star of the game, Collins at end, McKinley at fullback and Bolden, colored tackle, came in for their share of attention when the laurels were passed around. Sidney had five letter men available in Captain Stronsider, Paul, Rice, Palmisino and Casey.

Neri Friday afternoon the Home gridders will play their first away-from-home game of the season with DeGraff High School, starting at 3 o'clock. Summary:

Score by quarters:
Sidney 0 0 0 0-0
Home 6 6 0 0-12
Substitutions: Home—Wheeler for Stevenson; Alexander for Reynolds. Home scoring, touchdowns—R. Yowell (2), Referee—P. Fuller; umpire, P. Boxwell; head linesman, L. McCoy. Time of period—twelve minutes.

Charged with possessing liquor-making apparatus in connection with the discovery of a seventy-five gallon capacity still by police in a raid on the home of Aniel Bent, colored, 44 Taylor St., last August, Earl Hall, colored, Dayton, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Mayor Karl R. Babb Friday night. He is being held at Police Headquarters in default of $1,500 bond, pending a hearing assigned for next Tuesday. He was arrested by police here last Thursday.

Bent, in whose home the still was found, disclaimed ownership of the apparatus, asserting, police say, it had been placed there by Hall for the purpose of manufacturing liquor. Hall also denied ownership.

Bent was recently bound over to the grand jury on charges similar to the one pending against Hall.

COLLEGE HEAD KEPT BUSY BY ADDRESSES

That Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, is much in demand for addresses on varied subjects is indicated by an announcement Friday that he has twelve speaking engagements to fill between October 5 and December 17.

A partial list of his speaking engagements during the next three months follows: The Hamilton County Teachers' Association, Cincinnati, October 5; address at the eighty-fifth anniversary of the Cedarville United Presbyterian Church, October 8; Clark County Y. M. C. A., Springfield, October 11; Darke County Teachers' Association at Greenville, October 19; United Presbyterian Young People's Conference, Second Church, Springfield, October 21; Bradford Presbyterian Church, October 27; Niles, O., Presbyterian Church, November 3; The Central Teachers' Association, Dayton, November 8; Osborn Parent-Teachers' Association, November 12; The Patrons of Husbandry, Jamestown, December 5; The Literary Clubs, Urbana, December 14; Kiwanis Club at Chillicothe, December 17.

FOUR AUTOISTS ARE FINED BY COURT

Fines for violation of road laws were imposed upon four drivers of motor vehicles during the last few days by Probate Judge S. C. Wright.

Pleading guilty to charges of operating vehicles which were equipped improperly with lights, Francis Chenoweth, Emmet Zugel and Clyde Raymond were each fined $1 and costs. A. J. Stass entered a fine of $25 and costs when he entered a guilty plea to driving a motor truck which exceeded the weight limit and William Roer received a fine of $1 and costs because his car did not bear a tail light.

On a recommendation of Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall, an affidavit charging Thomas Owens with driving a truck bearing excessive weight was dismissed by Judge Wright. Owens had pleaded not guilty.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Central High School Orchestra under the direction of Mr. Miller held its organization meeting last week and chose Dorothy Need as president, Catherine Maxwell as vice president and Arthur Halstead as secretary and treasurer. The orchestra will accompany the glee club opera "In Old Louisiana." The band has not held its organization meeting but expects to within the next few days. They have been playing at the football games and have added a little pep to none too cheerful Xenia rooters.

They were outclassed nearly as bad as the football boys against Washington C. H. but nevertheless never gave up the fight.

The first pep meeting of the year was held last Friday before the football game. The meeting was held in the auditorium with John Beaham, cheer leader in charge of the "pep." He was ably assisted by Mary Soward and Annetta Price. After the school song was sung and a few rousing cheers given, the students were dismissed for the day.

Monday, September 30, Mr. Woodruff called the senior class together for a short meeting in Miss Haynes' room. Harold Bull, class president, asked the class' opinion on a plan which Mr. Woodruff suggested and which was being successfully carried out in other schools. The plan suggested was that the senior class should hold a luncheon either once or twice a month at the noon-hour for the purpose of transacting business, promoting interest in the school and class and also for a social time. Mrs. Wolfe offered to furnish the food, with a committee of senior girls helping her. Mr. Woodruff offered the class use of the radio at that time. The class was unanimously in favor of the idea and decided to hold a luncheon on the first Wednesday in every month. The first get-together was held Wednesday, October 2.

Marie Hall and Hazel Rector were appointed as committee to help plan the menu and decorations.

The Hi-Y Club will hold its second meeting Monday, October 7, at 7:30 p. m. A constitution is expected to be drawn up and a few short talks given. Other business of importance will also be transacted.

The senior class has been holding polar cake and candy sales in order to increase its treasury for the purpose of leaving a memorial to the school and to help publish the Cen-Sen. A fudge sale was held Tuesday, October 1 and a polar cake sale September 24. The seniors had been selling candy in the halls at noon until this week when the sales were turned over to the sophomores for a month. The juniors have been profiting by their sales at the football games.

The new Majestic radio is now in daily use at Central. The radio is turned on in the cafeteria during the activity period each day and ten pupils from each home room are permitted to attend the program sponsored at that hour by the Columbus Board of Education. These programs are broadcast from WLW, Cincinnati, The Ohio School of Music, Cincinnati, and other stations. The program will not be available from October 8 to October 17.

The junior boys have sent flowers to John Gibney, who is very seriously ill in Cleveland.

Last Friday, September 27, the senior girls held an election for the officers of their home room. Each month new officers are chosen. By this method, Miss Haynes gives each girl a chance to take part in home room affairs.

The president appoints each week a girl to take charge of absence slips, a girl to see that the rest room is left in order and a girl to conduct the opening exercises. In this way at the end of the year, each girl has taken a part in the activities of the home room. The officers elected for the present month were, Alice Gordon, president; Martha Cummings, vice president; Bertha Huffman, secretary; and Alice White, treasurer.

From a report given at the end of each month by the teachers, an increase in the number of students has been noted. The seniors now show an enrollment of sixty-nine, forty girls and twenty-nine boys. The juniors have a total of seventy-four, the sophomores 103 and the freshmen 119. The Junior High School has shown an increase of six pupils over September. The reports show that the Junior High School now has an enrollment of 242. The total students now attending Central High are 607.

EAST HIGH IS IDLE

EAST High School's scheduled football game with Dunbar High School, Lexington, Ky., at Cox Athletic Field Friday afternoon was cancelled by the latter school earlier in the week because of misunderstanding over terms of the contract for the game. As a result East gridders will not get into action again until next Friday afternoon when the Wilberforce University freshman eleven is met on the Wilberforce gridiron.

Other addresses on the program are to be made by Dr. C. P. Pinkerton, Pittsburgh, secretary of the board of administration of the United Presbyterian Church; Dr. R. A. Hutchison, Pittsburgh, secretary of the U. P. Board of American Missions; Dr. R. W. Burnside, Philadelphia, secretary of the United Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS TO AWAIT REMOVAL OF DOWNTOWN POLES

Installation of new overhead traffic lights given to the city by the Greene County Auto Club to improve the traffic situation at the three most congested street intersections in the business district of Xenia, must await the elimination of the intricate system of poles and wires, it is indicated by city officials.

The various public utilities have promised to cooperate with the city in getting rid of the unsightly poles in the business section by July 1, 1930, which means that about fifty poles in an area extending for two blocks in each direction from Main and Detroit Sts., will be eliminated and customers in that territory will be served by an underground system of relocated poles and wires.

The utilities do not plan to start the work of tearing up the streets and removing the poles until the next year when the weather will be more favorable for the project, it is said.

Meanwhile, the new traffic lights which are to be placed at Second and Detroit, Main and Detroit and Market and Detroit Sts., cannot be conveniently installed because of obstructing poles, city officials point out.

At present the Second and Detroit and Market and Detroit St. intersections have no traffic regulation devices. The old flower boxes were subsequently replaced by traffic buttons placed on the street. These were recently removed also because they did not measure up to expectations in protecting traffic, officials announce.

Dr. William Baer, dean of Orthopedic Surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, performed the operation. Mr. Perkins is reported to be doing nicely.

This is the third operation he has undergone, having been operated upon twice at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati. He will not be able to resume his studies at the University of Dayton, this year. Mr. Perkins' sister, Mrs. Esther Morgan, Dayton, is with him at the hospital.

MINISTERS ATTEND SPRINGFIELD MEET

Fifty Presbyterian ministers attended a meeting in Springfield Thursday in the interests of the Ohio Synod Fellowship Week, one of several such meetings held at the same time throughout the state.

Ministers from the Dayton, Marion and Cincinnati Presbyteries, including Xenia and Greene County ministers, were in attendance. The Rev. Harry Barr, Urbana, was the speaker at the morning session and the Rev. W. H. Small, host, Cincinnati and the Rev. Charles Ryan Adams, Springfield, were on the afternoon program.

CAPITAL-BLUFFTON GAME IS SCORELESS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 5.—A scoreless tie was the ultimate end of the fray between Capital University and Bluffton College, in Capital's season opener here yesterday and today both teams can sit back and watch someone else make repairs after the final gun has cracked.

Although the score gave an indication of two well balanced teams such was not the case, as Bluffton would or should have won handily had not some fumble proven costly to it, especially in the last quarter.

Mohr and Diller, were easily the outstanding players for Bluffton.

BANGHAM IS NAMED BEE INSPECTOR

Charles Bangham, Port William bee keeper, has been appointed state bee inspector by Charles A. Ross, state apiarist.

He is now working in Greene and Clinton Counties and will be sent into other counties of the state later. Bangham was a state inspector in New York last summer, working to control a disease known as American Foul Brood.

WASHINGTON BEATS WILMINGTON HIGH

Washington C. H. High "Blue Lions," victors over Xenia Central High School by a margin of 21 to 0 a week ago, opened their season with a 13 to 0 victory Friday over Wilmington High, an opponent of Xenia Central later in the season. As in the Xenia game, Captain Noon and Armbrust carried the ball for long gains.

Withrow High "Tigers," of Cincinnati, which appear here against the Bucs October 18, scored an other impressive victory at the expense of Norwood, 31 to 0 Friday. Freddy Rattemann ran wild, scoring three touchdowns on runs varying from fifteen to seventy-five yards.

PRINCETON LOSES STARS BY INJURY

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 5.—Four regulars, including Captain Jack Whyte, will watch Princeton open the season here today against Amherst, from the sidelines. These men were injured in practice and will not be ready for another week.

KENYON WINS

WESTERVILLE, O., Oct. 5.—Kenyon College opened the Ohio Conference, here yesterday with a 6 to 0 win over Otterbein, which today allows her the softest chair on the sidelines.

A drive from the twenty-five yard line was the prelude to the single touchdown of the game.

UNDERSTANDING IS PURPOSE OF COMING TO UNITED STATES

It will not be entirely international relationships.

Before the prime minister leaves for a week end isolation in the wilderness he will complete his formal social duties in the capital.

In the morning, Macdonald will call upon the vice president, the chief justice and the speaker of the house. He will be accompanied by Sir Esme Howard, ambassador of Great Britain.

The prime minister will also make a courtesy call on Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson at the department of state. Following a lunch at the British embassy, he will go to the White House as a guest for the remainder of his stay in Washington.

In addition to the colorful pomp and ceremony attached to the formalities, Washington contributed a new sensation to the prime minister in the activities of the newspaper cameramen.

When the premier left the White House after calling on President Hoover, flareslight made a miniature cone island of the lawn and speed-flash powder detonated like the nineteen-gun salute he received when coming up New York Harbor.

As a particularly large charge exploded, the lens of one camera popped off and was hurled at the feet of the prime minister. Several secret service men jumped instinctively.

Isabel also has had her first thrill. Her automobile became separated from the procession between the White House and the British embassy and swerved in and out of traffic in an effort to catch up. Several times collisions with other machines were narrowly averted.

"And—what takes you riding now, on picnics and—rides?" David repeated himself lamely.

Chatty trembled with delight, inside. He remembered! He was jealous!

"No one takes me riding!" she asserted. "I—don't care to go riding with anyone, since—since—" Chatty stopped.

But what was this? David, with a cold stern look on his face; David, as chilly in manner as if she was a stranger—

"You will excuse me now, Miss Chatterton?" he said, icily. "I am very busy."

"Why, Dave? Why—what did I say? What have I done? What?" David stopped in front of her, and his eyes blazed into hers with a passion that frightened her. Gone the coldness, gone the reserve, gone the impersonality that had chilled her; this was the David she had known, the David she loved, and yet a David strange and terrible.

"You lied!" he accused. "Three times within a month have I seen you with Bryant Dunning in his car. Twice with his arms around you, and as late as last night! I passed you on the road!"

Chatty remembered the car with the bright lights, for which they had to wait to start peering.

"I have heard of the parties at Winnie's, and the expeditions to Lollypop Inn," David stormed on. "You can't talk of others, Miss Chatterton, and not be talked about! But I don't listen to gossip; I merely believe my eyes, not my ears!"

Chatty's face flamed, hot, moist, in terrible shame.

"Believe in you? Believe in you?" David laughed, a nasty laugh, a laugh all scorn and contempt. "I did believe in you—I believed in you as a man believes in a holy thing in life! And you were not what I thought! You were a liar and a cheat, a thief and a trouble maker, a gossip and a slanderer! You tore my heart in two, and now you come here with a pack of falsehoods and want to do it again! Well, you can't! I don't believe in you. I never will believe in you! I hope I never see your pretty face, with its false eyes and its snake's tongue, again!"

And David flung out of the office and disappeared, leaving Chatty to pick up her shattered dream and creep from the office and the bank as best she could.

Chatty did not go back to the office that afternoon. She went home, to lock herself in her room and cry—cry as if her heart would break.

It was really all over.

He hated her. And the worst of it was, she had brought it on herself by lying to him. His questions had been a test. And she had not measured up. It wasn't fair to test a girl like that! What harm was there in riding with Bryant Dunning and letting him kiss her? Probably he had that girl with him when he passed them, parked. Doubtless he kissed and hugged her, the nasty cat! Had she asked him a single question? Not one!

The more Chatty thought of it, the angrier she got. She didn't know that the modern psychologist has discovered that the angrier we get at people, the more we show, often times, how wrong we are ourselves; that we get angry with others to restore our waning respect for ourselves.

Chatty was all wrong.

To pretend to herself that David was wrong and she right, was the only way in which she could support her own thoughts of herself.

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, Mr. David Jordan, you can just go plumb to it!" declared Chatty, passionately. "If I'm going to have the name, I might as well have the game! I've been good. I've tried, I've kept from repeating innocent gossip! Much good it did me! From now on—watch out!"

Just what harm it would do David for Chatty to gossip about her friends she didn't reason out. It was just a protest.

"And I'll go with Bryant Dunning all I please, so there! And he can kiss me all he pleases—and I'll go tonight!"

No sooner said than done. Out of the apartment to the drug store; a nickel in the slot, Bryant Dunning on the phone—

"Bryant? I need you! Seventy-three, sharp. And I don't want any friends along, either. Just us two, Bryant, dear. We're going to the Lollypop, and dance—and raise whoopee!"

CHAPTER XLVII

"I did—once. Then I found out the truth! I haven't believed in you since," he answered. Chatty was too stirred to see the trouble in his eyes.

She sat with her eyes cast down, thinking, thinking.

What could she say? She couldn't make open love to the man; tell him she was sick at heart for him, that if he didn't come back to her she'd—she'd—she didn't know what would happen.

But she had to say something. An opportunity like this might not come again! The bank was closed, and yet David made no move to go.

"But Dave," she ventured at last. "Don't you see? I want you to believe in me again! I'm trying—trying so hard to be—to be what you want—what everyone wants me to be!"

David gulped, got up, and walked up and down the room.

Chatty's heart leaped. He, too, was stirred, then! He wasn't going to be just impersonal nad cold!

"I'd like to believe in you," he said at last, reseating himself. "It hurt what you did."

"You mean—about Agnes?" Chatty's face flamed.

David nodded. "That—and other things. But you can't force belief. You can't say 'I believe' and make yourself do it. No one can. You believe or you don't believe—you love or you don't love—not according to what you want, but because you must. Don't you know that?"

Chatty did know it. She could no more help loving and wanting Dave than she could help breathing. Was belief, then, really like that? Something that you couldn't get by asking for it?

"Tell me some more about yourself," suggested Dave. "What do you do with yourself, evenings? How do you pass your time? Are you happy?"

Chatty relaxed. This was like old times—a real, friendly chat with Dave! He wanted her to talk to him. He had said she was "enormously attractive!" He had walked the floor. He wanted to believe in her! Surely, with so much in her favor, she would win him the rest of the way.

How to do it? How to make herself appear attractive, good, sweet in his eyes?

Chatty's thoughts were like lightning flashes, so fast and furiously did they come. David didn't like wild parties. He didn't drink! He liked bridge and Billie and George and quiet amusements. Better not tell him about Bryant and Winnie and Jim, then.

"Oh, I spend a lot of time with Billie. When she's not too busy with George, that is," she amended, hurriedly. "And I stay home a lot, too. Dad—Dad rather needs me. He has been trying very hard to get a sewing-machine for mother. And I'm helping him—"

Chatty tried not to blush. She hadn't helped him at all. But she was going to! "I'll give him some money tonight, so that won't be a fib!" thought Chatty.

"And—who takes you riding now, on picnics and—rides?" David repeated himself lamely.

Chatty trembled with delight, inside. He remembered! He was jealous!

"No one takes me riding!" she asserted. "I—don't care to go riding with anyone, since—since—" Chatty stopped.

But what was this? David, with a cold stern look on his face; David, as chilly in manner as if she was a stranger—

I hope I never see your pretty face, with its false eyes and its snake's tongue, again!"

And David flung out of the office and disappeared, leaving Chatty to pick up her shattered dream and creep from the office and the bank as best she could.

Chatty did not go back to the office that afternoon. She went home, to lock herself in her room and cry—cry as if her heart would break.

It was really all over.

He hated her. And the worst of it was, she had brought it on herself by lying to him. His questions had been a test. And she had not measured up. It wasn't fair to test a girl like that! What harm was there in riding with Bryant Dunning and letting him kiss her? Probably he had that girl with him when he passed them, parked. Doubtless he kissed and hugged her, the nasty cat! Had she asked him a single question? Not one!

The more Chatty thought of it, the angrier she got. She didn't know that the modern psychologist has discovered that the angrier we get at people, the more we show, often times, how wrong we are ourselves; that we get angry with others to restore our waning respect for ourselves.

Chatty was all wrong.

To pretend to herself that David was wrong and she right, was the only way in which she could support her own thoughts of herself.

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, Mr. David Jordan, you can just go plumb to it!" declared Chatty, passionately. "If I'm going to have the name, I might as well have the game! I've been good. I've tried, I've kept from repeating innocent gossip! Much good it did me! From now on—watch out!"

Just what harm it would do David for Chatty to gossip about her friends she didn't reason out. It was just a protest.

"And I'll go with Bryant Dunning all I please, so there! And he can kiss me all he pleases—and I'll go tonight!"

No sooner said than done. Out of the apartment to the drug store; a nickel in the slot, Bryant Dunning on the phone—

"Bryant? I need you! Seventy-three, sharp. And I don't want any friends along, either. Just us two, Bryant, dear. We're going to the Lollypop, and dance—and raise whoopee!"

The Theater

The famous musical comedy success "Rio Rita" will open the Victory Theater, Dayton, for the fall semester, according to information coming from Elmer Redelle, manager. The musical show will begin its engagement Thursday, October 10 and continue through Saturday with a matinee on the final day.

"Rio Rita" is a Ziegfeld show, but Ziegfeld, with his fingers burnt on expensive road production, is not sponsoring its present tour. Instead Ziggy sold the road rights to George Wintz, the erstwhile Dayton plumbing salesman, who is reading the show.

The leading roles are sung by Arthur Rogers, last seen as leading tenor of "My Maryland" and Marybeth Conolly, from "The Vagabond King".

W. J. Burns needs no introduction as America's super-sleuth. Less known is the fact that a famous case which he solved was the basis for the Harriet Ford-Harvey J. O'Higgins story, "The Argyle Case," Thomas Meighan stars in the Warner Bros. Vitaphone screen adaptation.

"The Argyle Case" is the same of course, and the scenes and many of the chorus girls are said to be beautiful.

We reported yesterday that Lillian Gish, recently returned from Europe, is hurrying to Hollywood in the belief that the talkies hold much for her future.

Now comes word from United Artists that she will be starred in "The Swan," a screen story adapted from Ferenc Molnar's modern romantic comedy of the same name. The company will go into production about October 20 and Miss Gish's supporting cast will include Rod La Roque, Conrad Nagel and Marie Dressler. Melville Baker, who did the story for the screen, is the man who translated and adapted Molnar's play from the Hungarian when it was produced in New York a few years ago. His grandfather, George M. Baker, wrote more than seventy plays that were big hits in their day and his father, Robert M. Baker, contributed such successes as "Beverly of Graustark," "Arms and the Girl" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

An exhaustive research into the life of Abraham Lincoln convinces D. W. Griffith that the martyred President is a more complex character than any of the thousands of villains and heroes he has portrayed on the screen during his twenty-two years of experience.

Griffith is preparing a talkie epic around Lincoln's career and discovered that Lincoln never drank liquor, though he never censured those who did. On one occasion a committee of temperance workers pleaded with him to dismiss Ulysses Grant because the general was drunk when he won the battle of Shiloh. Lincoln smiled and said: "I'd like to get more of the same brand for some of my other generals."

INVITED TO SPEAK

An invitation has been extended to C. McCoy Franklin, president of the noted school for Mountain Highlanders at Crossmore, N. C., to deliver an address at a union service at Cedarville College October 13. President Franklin gave a number of addresses last year in Cincinnati and other Ohio cities as well as adjacent states and everywhere was received with enthusiasm.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

Though he was deeply religious, Lincoln visited a voodoo woman and laughed when she told him he was destined to be a President of the United States. On his wedding day the great President fled to the woods in a panic of embarrassment when a party of searchers discovered him wet with the perspiration of shy fear.

FIND FRENCH FLYERS SAFE IN MANCHURIA BRIEF REPORTS SAY

Costes And Bellonte May Have Broken Distance Record

PARIS, Oct. 5. — Captain Dieudonne Costes and Maurice Bellonte, famous French airmen given up for lost in a sensational attempt to shatter all non-stop distance flight records, landed at Kowchin, a tiny village near Tsitsihar, Manchuria, a dispatch from Harbin revealed today.

If the dispatch is true and the fliers safe, it means that they have broken the existing distance record by more than 400 miles.

In addition to the dispatch from Tsitsihar, the French air ministry has received an unofficial communication in which the fliers were quoted as saying they landed at 3 p. m. yesterday.

There obviously is some miscommunication in time, or else the landing in Manchuria was not made after a direct non-stop flight from Paris. The airmen took off from Le Bourget air field a week ago yesterday, and on the following Sunday were reported sighted some distance from Irkutsk, Siberia.

There is a possibility the message was sent by the fliers some days ago and was badly delayed in transmission. Their plane, the "Question Mark" was not equipped from the point of view of fuel supply to remain in the air for a week at a stretch.

The air ministry confessed itself unable to understand the message, and took immediate steps to verify it.

Costes and Bellonte failed in an attempt to fly the Atlantic several months ago, turning back to France when caught in a violent storm over the Azores. Both are well-known war aces.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Dispatches from Osaka, Japan, to the evening newspapers here today state that the French fliers Costes and Bellonte have landed at the village of Kowchin, near Tsitsihar. There are no details.

LAUNCH FIRST AIR MAIL TO ARGENTINE

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 5.—The first regular air mail between the United States and Buenos Aires departed from the Pan-American airport here today. The flight will follow the canal zone route and then will take the west coast of South America to Santiago, Chile. From there it will cross the Andes to the Argentine capital.

The schedule provides only eight days, as compared with thirty-five by steamer.

The northbound service will start October 12.

In flying over the Andes the planes will have to attain an altitude of more than 17,000 feet.

EXPECT ARMORY TO WAIT UNTIL SPRING

Actual construction work on Xenia's new $50,000 state armory which will be erected on a triangular site purchased by the city in the Dodds addition will probably not start until early next spring.

In the opinion of city officials, a $5,000 bond issue to finance purchase of the tract was authorized by City Commission and the deeds to the twelve plat lots which comprise the desired tract were recently turned over to the state.

Since that time there have been no new developments on the armory situation, the next step being for the state architect to prepare plans and specifications for the building. City officials believe that the state will await favorable weather next year before commencing construction work.

HELD FOR IRONTON

George Smith, wanted at Ironton, O., on a charge of abandoning two minor children, was arrested by L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, Friday night three miles north of Osborn, where he had been making his home. A warrant for his arrest was received at the sheriff's office from the prosecuting attorney at Ironton. Smith is being held in the County Jail, pending the arrival of Ironton officials, who will return him to that city for prosecution.

STATE OF COLORADO LAUNCHES PROBE OF BLOODY PENAL RIOT

Death List Twelve; Leader Killed Companions

CANON CITY, Colo., Oct. 5.—A pall of sadness and even traces of terror still hung over this city today with the passing excitement and horror over the brutal slaying of guards and convicts during an orgy of bloodshed unprecedented in the history of western penal institutions.

The death toll of the bloody state penitentiary riot stood at twelve—seven guards and five convicts, a score were suffering from wounds and injuries sustained during the seventeen hour riot precipitated by Danny Daniels, arch-convict, in his desperate attempt to escape, along with four other convict companions.

It was definitely established today that Daniels caused eleven of the twelve deaths. Three guards were killed in the early rising and Daniels mercilessly slew four other guards, shooting them down in cold blood within the prison walls. He then sent a "mercy" shot into Jimmy Pardue, co-conspirator, who had been injured; shot down three of his other followers, and then committed suicide to end the bloody siege on the "tomb of living men."

Work of reconstructing the battered buildings of the state prison was begun here today with the state of Colorado opening an investigation into the cause of the convict mutiny.

Gov. William Adams is expected to come from Denver and, following a conference with Warden Francis Crawford, will launch an investigation which will result in the death penalty for any convicts found guilty of participation in the bloodiest battle in the history of American penal institutions.

The board of corrections, governing body of the institution, met last night and Warden Crawford presented the results of his investigation thus far.

Property damage to the various buildings has been estimated at $300,000. Four buildings were destroyed by flames, the dining hall, the houses 1 and 2 and the chapel. Warden Crawford declared that he will put the convicts to work at once reconstructing the buildings to provide shelters for the inmates.

At present the 900 convicts are housed in emergency tents within the institution's walls and are guarded by a detail of militiamen.

Reconstruction of the scene in the "execution room" of cell house No. 2 by prison officials shows that Danny Daniels, ring leader of the rioting convicts, killed five of his companions and then shot himself dead.

The convicts did not commit suicide, as it was first reported. From this Daniels is charged with having engineered nine deaths, four guards and five convicts.

Several mysteries in connection with the outbreak will take weeks to solve, it was indicated by officials. One of these centers about the disappearance of the weapons used by the convicts before the rioting commenced with the deaths of five rioters.

The prisoners had several revolvers and about 1,000 rounds of ammunition stored in the various cell houses, according to Joseph Shiloh, steward of the penitentiary, who was a prisoner of Daniels and James Pardue for several hours during the massacre.

Plans for the riot had been carefully laid and fostered by the convicts over a period of several months, according to Warden Crawford.

The killers undoubtedly had aid from the outside and had been planning for this break for weeks and possibly months. Every bit of evidence we have points to a scheme which has been in the process of development for a long time," the warden said.

"We felt, of course, that we adopted the only policy open to us under the circumstances. Out of hand, a half dozen desperate criminals cowed and terrorized the rest and delivered to the prison authorities an ultimatum threatening the murder of valued guards."

SUBMITS TO SECOND SURGERY IN BERLIN FOR APPENDICITIS

Former Polly Lauder Passes Ordeal Successfully

BERLIN, Oct. 5.—Mrs. James J. (Gene) Tunney, wife of the former heavyweight champion of the world, underwent an operation for appendicitis here today. The operation was entirely successful.

The operation was performed at the clinic of Professor A. W. Meyer, the famous German surgeon who saved Mrs. Tunney's life when she was close to death from an abdominal abscess on Brioni Island in the Adriatic this spring.

Mrs. Tunney, the former Polly Lauder, Greenwich, Conn., heiress was taken to the clinic by her husband yesterday. There was no emergency but an operation was deemed advisable.

Tunney left his wife at the clinic last night and returned to his apartments in the Hotel Esplanade. He was still at the hotel when reached by International News Service on the telephone at 9 o'clock this morning, and was unaware that Dr. Meyer had already begun the operation.

"You certainly caught me this time," the elusive champion said. "I was just going to call the clinic to find out about it."

Tunney at first refused to confirm or deny that the operation had been decided upon, but finally added:

"You may consider this my confirmation."

The Tunneys arrived here early this week from France, and immediately called to see Dr. Meyer. The visit gave rise to erroneous reports that Tunney himself had to undergo an operation. But this was ridiculed both by the surgeon and the fighter himself.

Through his secretary, Tunney later gave to the International News Service details of the operation.

"The operation lasted half an hour and was a full success," the fighter said. "Mrs. Tunney's appendix was removed because of its condition due to the abscess."

"The operation proceeded normally, and there were no complications whatever. Things turned out exactly as Professor Meyer predicted when he operated on Mrs. Tunney at Brioni."

"My absence during the operation was more or less according to plan. Dr. Meyer wishing to spare me too much excitement, Mrs. Tunney behaved most bravely. I am told."

Tunney proceeded to the clinic as soon as he was informed the operation had taken place, but he will not be able to see his wife for some little while.

IDENTIFY DEAD MAN FOUND ALONG RAILS NEAR XENIA FRIDAY

Omer Whetstone, Dayton, Committed Suicide Says Coroner

The beheaded body of a man found along the right-of-way of the Pennsylvania Railroad, two miles east of Xenia, by a section crew at 6 a. m. Friday, was identified late Friday afternoon as Omer Whetstone, 44, 111 Montana Ave., Dayton, painter.

Partial identification was made by Fred O. Lincum, Pennsylvania Railroad detective, who viewed the remains at the scene and undertook establishment and recognized the man as a stranger he had caught loitering in the railroad yards east of the Columbus St. crossing at 3 a. m. Thursday and who gave that name and address when booked at Police Headquarters for the remainder of the night on a vagrancy charge.

Abandoning a previous theory that the man apparently had been run down by a train while walking along the tracks, Dr. F. M. Chambliss, county coroner, wrote the case off as suicide upon receiving additional information Friday that Whetstone had made an unsuccessful attempt to end his life at Dayton two weeks ago by slaying his throat.

Coroner Chambliss learned that Whetstone was only released last Monday from Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, where he had been recuperating from the suicide attempt and is of the opinion that the man deliberately laid his head on the rails and waited calmly for a train to pass sometime Thursday night. He had carefully moved everything from his clothes that would serve to identify him.

Identity was definitely established Friday night by Charles McKay, Dayton, an acquaintance, who came to Xenia and viewed the body.

Previously Coroner Chambliss had been in communication with the business manager of the Dayton Painter's Union, over long-distance telephone. The manager said the description of the dead man tallied in every respect with that of Whetstone. McKay said he had known Whetstone for years and that they had grown up together at Greentown.

Authorities believe Whetstone was demented and that when taken into custody by the detective on the preceding evening he was wandering in the railroad yards awaiting an opportunity to make a second attempt to end his life.

The second suicide effort was postponed for a day when he was locked up at Police Headquarters. He was released, however, the next morning.

A sister, Mrs. Bertha Little, Middletown, O., was notified and will come to Xenia Saturday to make funeral arrangements. A step father, Frank Hathaway, also survives.

DIVORCE POLITICS FROM TARIFF BODY WITH COMPROMISE

Order Commission To Act Judicially On All Claims

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Under an armistice in which compromise was again substituted for partisan warfare, the senate had moved today to take the U. S. tariff commission out of politics by proclaiming it a non-partisan, judicial, fact-finding agency for administration of the tariff law.

The commission, if it follows the instructions laid down by the senate, will "act judicially" at all times and ignore all "partisanship and party policy" in its recommendations. This compromise, by which the present membership of three Republicans and three Democrats is retained, was adopted without a record vote. It marked the settlement of another heated tariff dispute by amicable means and served to emphasize the lament of Republican leaders that President Hoover entered the flexible tariff controversy only to go down to defeat.

The senate finance committee meanwhile forwarded to the treasury department another list of 100 industrial mercantile and importing concerns for reports on their "financial records" during the last seven years. The Republican membership sponsored 232 names, topped by the great mercantile houses of Sears, Roebuck and Co., John Wanamaker, Saks and Co., Houbigant, Inc., Lord and Taylor, Alfred Dunhill, Inc., Gimbel Bros., R. H. Macy and Co., F. W. Woolworth Co., Marshall Field and Co., Montgomery Ward and Co., S. S. Kresge Co., and the Gruen Watchmakers Guild.

As the massive hearing entered its second day, indications were that it will last into next week. A great amount of testimony cannot be heard today as the court will take a recess at noon until Monday. The hearing involved Sheriff

DEFENSE FAILS TO IMPEACH WITNESS AGAINST PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—After a lengthy defense attack upon her story of what took place in the reception room of the Pantages Theater last August, the testimony of Eunice Pringle, 17-year-old co-ed with stage aspirations, today stood practically intact. For two hours yesterday afternoon the girl answered questions put to her by attorneys for Alexander Pantages, wealthy theater owner, in an attempt to break down her story of the alleged attack which may result in a fifty-year prison term for the fifty-seven-year-old defendant.

The grilling cross-examination followed the girl's morning testimony in which she voiced her accusations under the direction of District Attorney Byron Fitts.

Several times during the ordeal she was forced to halt, sob a bit, then brush the tears away with a handkerchief.

She testified that Pantages led her into a small office on the mezzanine floor of his theater August 9 to discuss her application for a booking with his vaudeville circuit. Instead of discussing her vaudeville engagement, the girl told the court, Pantages told her of an unhappy domestic life. Then he began to make love to her she asserted.

District Attorney Fitts impersonating Pantages, directed a mock scuffle in which Eunice re-enacted the theater man's alleged advances.

The girl said Pantages threw her to the floor and placed his hand over her mouth to keep her from crying out.

RUSSIA WILL SPEND EIGHT BILLIONS IN INDUSTRY PROGRAM

Announcing Plan To Americanize All Industry

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—George A. Bryant, Jr., vice president of the Austin Company of Cleveland, O., who returned to the United States from Europe aboard the liner Berengaria announced today that Russia has embarked upon a gigantic program for Americanizing industry. The program covers a five-year period and involves an outlay of $8,000,000,000.

Bryant returned with a $40,000,000 contract to build a huge automobile plant and a model industrial city to be located near Nijni Novgorod and be called Austingrad. It will be designed for the ultimate population of nearly 50,000 people. The automobile plant will be built to produce 100,000 Ford cars and trucks annually, with a final capacity of about 500,000. Preliminary dredging work has already been started and actual construction will commence next spring. The company expects to complete the job within fifteen months.

Bryant sees an extensive market for American skill and machinery in Russia. In building Austingrad modern American construction equipment will be used in addition to from 9,000 to 12,000 Russian laborers. The Austin company will be paid in gold from this country for its work. Bryant declared that his negotiations with the leading figures in the Soviet government had convinced him of their business acumen as well as their honesty.

"Although some classes of people have suffered from the overthrow of the czarist reign, the purchasing power of the people as a whole is better than before the war," said Bryant. "In order to catch up with demand for goods and to increase prosperity Russia hopes to put American mass production into effect. While the government owns most industry, private enterprise is not prohibited."

UNDERSTANDING IS PURPOSE OF COMING TO UNITED STATES

Accompanies Hoover To Retreat At Camping Lodge

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—An understanding, not an alliance—friendly co-operation, not distrustful rivalry—and a mutual undertaking to compel peace in a war-weary world. These, in his own words, are the motives that impelled J. Ramsay MacDonald, the prime minister of Great Britain, to snatter the traditions of a century and a half by crossing 3,000 miles of ocean in order to sit down, friendly like, with the president of the United States and talk over the problems that contain the germs of international irritation.

Peace, first of all between Great Britain and the United States, but lastly and in its broader concept peace throughout the world, is the objective of MacDonald's visit.

The basis for it, he believes, must first of all be established on the structure of friendship between the English-speaking peoples, and it is to strengthen that structure that he has come to Washington to "talk it out."

Before he leaves, the British premier will have talked over many things with President Hoover and with American officialdom generally. The conversations will run the scale of Anglo-American and world problems—from navies to trade, from Europe's checkered politics to the policies that both countries shall follow in the Far East, which may regard as the theater of "the next war," if there is to be a next war.

Peace, peace, peace—the sturdy, square-built Scotsman, who comes from that class of people that always bears the burden of any war, talks of nothing else. If he is steered off into talk of concrete things, it is only in their relation to the broader aspect of peace.

Standing square-shouldered and square-faced before a throng of eager admirers at the embassy last night, the first laborer ever to rise to the prime minister's brush with aside inquiries as to navies and other specific problems, and explained:

"The trouble with the world today is misunderstanding. And the main purpose, the great purpose of my visit to Washington is to try and make misunderstanding impossible."

"Neither your president, I believe, nor myself—I certainly can speak for myself—have any idea of spending much time in discussing details."

"We should like to survey together the large and wide, the high and deep problems of international peace. We have had our experiences in international war. We have all taken risks in the making of war. Isn't it time, my friends, that we should take some risks to secure peace. As long as we think of peace in terms of war, we will never get peace. As soon as we think of international dangers in terms of peace and with the determination to maintain peace, then I have the belief and the hope that we shall maintain peace."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 5.—The silent peaks of the Blue Ridge Mountains will close in today upon the peace conference between President Hoover and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain.

The British premier will accompany his presidential host this afternoon into the fastnesses of the Virginia mountains. At the Hoover camping retreat in the Virginia wilderness the American president and the prime minister will talk man-to-man concerning mutual understanding between the two great English-speaking nations.

Mrs. Hoover and the premier's daughter Isabel MacDonald, whose cheeks are tinted like the red autumn leaves, will accompany the party. What these two hostesses of leading statesmen will talk about may never be known but it is hardly audacious to predict that

BERT LEMING IS WOUNDED BY TARGET RIFLE

Bert Leming, 46, Kennedy St., is suffering from a bullet wound in the left chest just above the heart inflicted as a result of the accidental discharge of a 22 caliber rifle in the hands of a 13-year-old neighbor boy named Lehr while they were both engaged in target practice in the front yard of Leming's home early Saturday afternoon.

Leming was standing about twelve feet away from the youth, who was reloading the rifle when he accidentally released the trigger, discharging the weapon.

Leming was rushed in an auto to the office of Dr. F. M. Chambliss, where an examination showed a bullet had penetrated the deep muscles in the left breast above the heart. The wound is not considered serious, Leming was afterward able to return home.

COLLEGE LAUNCHES ATTEMPT TO DOUBLE SCHOOL ENDOWMENT

With employment of Dr. John Newton Strain, Pulaski, Pa., as financial and field secretary of the college, Cedarville College is entering upon a campaign for $250,000 increased endowment within the next two years.

Already a number of small gifts aggregating $10,000 have been received.

The present endowment is $250,000 for the college and $70,000 for the seminary while the college property and buildings are valued at $240,000.

A million dollar endowment fund is the ultimate goal of the college but is hoped to raise the first installment of $250,000 double the present endowment, within the next two years.

It is pointed out that a new dormitory and a college farm are the most immediate needs of the school and that it will eventually be necessary to enlarge the chapel which at present is crowded to capacity. It has been necessary to use two side rooms to enlarge the seating capacity.

The appointment of Dr. Strain, who will move to Cedarville and take up his new duties as field secretary October 14, marks the first step in the campaign to make the college more widely known.

Laufert, designed to capitalize the interest of young people in religion and to develop Christian character through worship. It contains many of the great hymns of the church which have been tested by time while supplementing the old are many hymns of recent origin by well-known writers and composers in Europe and America. A number of new hymns, written by present-day authors and composers, appear for the first time and the contents are arranged so that they are readily available to the novice. They include every known element of worship.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY
MAGNIFY THE LORD—My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour.—Luke 1:46, 47.

MACDONALD'S VISIT

A century and a half after the thirteen colonies declared their independence of Great Britain, a prime minister under the crown from which they absolved themselves of all allegiance is on his way to the United States on what he hopes will be a "fruitful innovation." The fruit that Mr. MacDonald looks forward to gathering on his American anabasis is a better understanding between our country and his, which shall remove causes of friction and thereby promote greater harmony and cordiality in the interest of Anglo-American and world peace.

Walter Hines Page once expressed the wish that the president of the United States and the king of England might stand up side by side and let the world see what they looked like. That is not so easily arranged. The king did the next best thing when he sent this message to Mr. MacDonald, as the latter was leaving London:

"On the eve of your journey, I wish you God-speed. It is a departure that will be surrounded with good wishes for it is a contribution to those happy relations between two great peoples which must be an article of faith among all men of goodwill."

With this royal benediction on his mission, when Mr. MacDonald steps upon American soil he will be both a personal representative of his king and the elective head of a nation whose sympathy with his motives in coming to the United States already has been widely articulated. The innovation that he is creating in a graceful gesture. There is to it, however, a great deal more than that. There is the desire of the head of one government for the time being to meet the head of another government and discuss with him matters of vital import to their two countries; and the conviction that this method of negotiation offers greater promise than the indirect method of diplomatic discussion.

The United States desires to be on terms of amity with all nations. The peculiarly close relations existing between it and Great Britain are the consequences of natural history development. They afford in a community of interests in many directions, a potential basis for complete harmony of action. They unfortunately provide, also, a number of competitive contacts that lend themselves to misunderstanding and bickering.

The purpose of Mr. MacDonald in visiting Mr. Hoover is to promote Anglo-American harmony through understanding. A similar purpose should be the keynote of his reception.

An informal talk with the newspapermen at 10 Downing street is described as an innovation in England. A few more such innovations and the course of true international love may run more smoothly.

It was General Hancock who said the tariff was a local issue. Just now its locality is Washington and no place else and it is doubtful if any one in Washington is interested outside official circles.

The furore created among Boston's intelligentsia by the banning of "Strange Interlude" suggests that even in the Hub there are people who don't know when they are well off.

The excitement aroused in parts of this country by the discovery of "pants burglars" looks as if Eveless paradises still exist.

NEW YORK. — The thirteenth floor of the Equitable building is in greater demand by tenants than any other tier; yet uptown farther, in the Grand Central zone, prejudice against the thirteenth floor is so deeply rooted that 11 of the 15 tallest towers there have eliminated the thirteenth floor entirely. THE LETTER OF THE LAW

There has always been much talk about keeping the letter of the law and not its spirit. There is such a thing as being exceedingly exact and precise about certain details and winning a great reputation for achievements which may actually be trifling. Often we hear of a boy or girl who for one year or five years or ten has never been late to school by as much as five minutes or never absent for one day. That is creditable, but it is far less important than an honest striving to master a subject, to learn, to fit oneself for a useful life. Healthy curiosity, leading to the life-long habit of study, is of vastly more account than keeping rules to the very letter. Punctuality is important. No man has a right to be so selfish as to waste another man's time. But to be a few minutes late and have something important to say is better than being on time to the minute and occupying no place in the council other than a chair.

Now and then one reads in the newspapers of a man who has not missed being in church every Sunday for 40 years. Too bad. In order to build such a sensational record he has doubtless neglected many important things that he should have done.

The spirit of performance is better than the letter of performance.

OBSERVATION

We think we go about with our eyes open, but the fact is that the powers of observation of the average person are very poor. Unless we give special attention to concentration we see things only in part, carelessly and inaccurately. Many things are so commonplace that by habit they are never really within range of our observation. Hardly a man who is reading this paragraph can tell, without looking, how many buttons, if any, there are on the sleeve of his coat. If you are in the habit of walking to work each morning you may have walked down the same street scores or even hundreds of times. Can you name the stores and business houses that you pass, in consecutive order?

Again, if you are not bald, you probably have no idea how many hairs you have on your head. It may be interesting to note that a single square inch of scalp contains about 744 hairs. This number multiplied by 120 square inches, the surface of the average head, gives us 89,280 as the number of hairs on the head. Well, well, so much for that.

WORKERS URGED TO AID IN PREVENTING LEAD POISONING

By HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, Public Health Service

Hugh S. Cumming was born in Virginia in 1869. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia and the University College of Medicine, Richmond. In 1894, he was appointed assistant surgeon in the public health service. Since 1929 he has been surgeon general. He is a member of several medical organizations and has written various works and pamphlets on public health.

The responsibility for the prevention of industrial poisoning rests largely on the manufacturer, but the worker also is responsible. The manufacturer should provide adequate safety appliances and educate employees in their use, but not frequently safety measures and devices provided are ignored or misused by employees.

Lead poisoning is one of the great problems of industrial hygiene. In the early part of the nineteenth century experimental investigations of the action of lead were begun, but it is only during the past 25 years that much progress has been made in methods of preventing lead poisoning. The application of knowledge of how to prevent it, together with improved methods in the handling of poisonous materials, will greatly reduce the incidence of this and other industrial poisonings in the future.

The following are some of the principal industries and trades in which workers are exposed to lead, lead mining and smelting, making white or red lead; the manufacture of paint, storage batteries, glazes, enamels, pottery, and most lead objects; painting, brass founding and polishing cut glass and brass.

In general all of those who handle lead-containing materials, ever such diverse things as putty and window shades, are exposed more or less to lead poisoning.

The state of Maine has had a number of deaths from lead poisoning which were not at all industrial in the ordinary sense of the word. These cases of poisoning were among the people who resided in rural communities and used lead piping to bring spring water to their houses. The lead from the pipes was dissolved and poisoning resulted from using this water. This condition has also been found in many other states.

When a person is exposed to a dangerous amount of lead he begins to absorb it and his system will show evidence of it very early. The lead is absorbed and shows its disabling effects and yet do not have acute poisoning. If the amount of lead is insufficient to produce acute poisoning and the worker continues in the occupation offering exposure he may develop lead poisoning in a chronic form, which is at times harder to overcome than the acute condition.

IT'S THEIR TURN NEXT!

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

You have no doubt heard the saying, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." This little comment could never be applied more truthfully than in the 17th and 18th centuries. What glorious names are tied up with these periods—the very late 16th and early 17th centuries. There was Elizabeth, vibrant, dynamic Elizabeth, who encouraged research in beauty. In fact, she is purported to have spent pleasant relaxed hours away from her court duties, devising and creating cosmetics for herself. Her perfumes, concocted just for her, by the most famous of French perfumers, earned for her the title of connoisseur of perfumes.

Then came the most exciting periods of European history, Marie Theresa, Catherine the Great—Barberina, the court favorite of Frederick the Great—women of beauty and brilliancy of intellect. These were women who shocked the masculine world with their ability to think. Somehow, the men of those days, even as some of our most modern men, were horrified at the idea that normal intelligence could live in the head of a pretty woman. Particularly in such exquisitely beautiful women. Women who spent hours at their dressing table enhancing their beauty with every means at their command. Of Marie Theresa you most likely know—the queen who "wept and took and took" anything that she desired because so few could resist her beauty—Catherine, who always declared, "I am only a woman," the while she ruled with an iron hand. Barberina, the dancer, who played such a role at Frederick's court at Sanas Souci.

During this period the influence of the French was felt, not only in Europe, but in the Colonies, in that wild, terrifying place called "America." Perfumes, elaborate wigs, exotic cosmetics, were the fashion of the day—and I suppose I should whisper this—the men were just as much interested in such feminine foibles as the women themselves, as any Colonial picture well testifies. The men and women actually vied with each other in the brilliancy of their dress, the luxury of their coiffures, as evidenced by the Washington wig.

The French influence in America was very strong. The fashions of the French court were copied religiously in the colonial drawing rooms. The fan was held just below eye level so that the intriguing beauty spot was visible. Coquetry, flirtation and flattery, these constituted the spirit of the times. Of course we modern women smile discreetly at such levity, but I wonder if, after all, Venus was not the mother of us all?

Behind the Scenes In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—"For safety's sake," once remarked the Automobile Age, of London—than which publication John Bull himself is no more typically British, "English motorists who plan tours abroad will do well to remember that traffic keeps to the wrong side of the road in practically all countries outside our own islands, New Zealand and the Argentine Republic."

Doubtless it will come as a severe shock to the Automobile Age's editor to learn that now Argentine traffic also has flopped to the "wrong side"—that is to say, to the right, like most of the rest of us.

Senator Tasker L. Oddie, of Nebraska, who, just back from the recent Pan-American roads convention at Rio de Janeiro, brings news of Argentina's revolutionary departure from age-old precedent, speaks of it as a mighty significant development in the relationship among the Americans—from the standpoint of communications, at any rate.

Moreover, the senator is absolutely correct about it.

A country's decision to switch its traffic from the left to the right side of all its highways may not seem, at first thought, to be a matter of much international consequence.

The truth is that it involves considerable trouble; and the fact that Argentina is willing to make the best of it bespeaks a desire to acquiesce in majority custom, which perhaps means more than the republic's indorsement of some political treaty of plenty of recognized importance.

It is a long time now since North American interests have been concerned themselves in Latin American road building. I myself can recall a number of missions from the United States which tried to stir up enthusiasm in the subject during several years' residence of my own in that part of the world.

Their reason was pretty obvious. The missionaries generally either had road machinery to sell or they were manufacturers of vehicles which needed roads to travel on, before a market could be created for them—and the southern continent was almost roadless in those days; is yet, indeed, except in a few localities.

The Latin Americans are polite folk. They always received the missionaries with open arms and promised them wonderful things—but they never did anything. The missionaries invariably went home full of bright hopes—and that was the end of it.

My thought was that this latest convention at Rio simply would prove to be a repetition of the old, old story.

In querying Senator Oddie for details of the gathering I was sure the usual glittering generalities would be forthcoming—and at first that was exactly what I supposed I was listening to, when the senator began to describe the affair to me.

Then, all at once, out came the item concerning Argentina's left-to-right change in her traffic regulations. This was information of the first order.

Argentina's next door neighbors are Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia and Chile. All of them keep to the right; Argentina alone to the left, hitherto. Plainly traffic crossing her frontiers would be badly disorganized upon entering her territory, from no matter what direction. In a five-to-one minority, she yielded.

stability of traffic uniformity with her neighbors was no mere trifle, as it would have been in the case of one of the peewee republics north of Panama. Argentina is not only big and rich; she is mighty set in her way ordinarily. She wants roads or she never would have made such a concession.

And the only way in which highways between the United States and the Argentine Republic can attain their maximum of value to the latter is by means of their development throughout the entire length of the continent—inasmuch as Argentina is at the extreme southern end of it.

Hence she evidently visualized a vast, complete inter-continental system.

"It will take quite awhile," said Senator Oddie, "but it is bound to come"—and now I believed him—for the Argentines are a canny people, who would no more transfer their traffic from the left to the right side of all their roads than they would change the form of their government, unless they knew just what they were doing.

"Think how it will promote acquaintance," continued the senator, "when a tourist can get into his car up in my state of Nevada and never stop—except for a gas and a few hours of sleep or a hot dog occasionally—until he gets to Patagonia!"

And today the whole world's traffic keeps to the wrong side of the road except in the British Isles and New Zealand.

Dropped Fish Balls Tomato Sauce
Whole Wheat Bread Fresh Fruit

Dinner

Cream of Cauliflower Soup
Beef Pot Roast Browned Potatoes
Cabbage Salad
Sliced Peaches Cookies
Coffee

This menu was planned for three people. The individual omelet solves the difficulty of the housekeeper who has to serve one or more breakfasts separately on account of members of the family rising at different times.

Today's Recipes

Individual Jelly Omelet—Put two eggs into a bowl with salt and pepper to taste. Cook half a cauliflower beats with a fork and add two tablespoons milk or cream; put one level teaspoon butter in a small frying pan, shake it over the fire till frothy, turn in the eggs and shake over a quick fire till they are set; spread jelly over the eggs and then fold over carefully and turn into a hot dish.

Cream of Cauliflower Soup—Heat one pint of veal stock, one pint of milk and half a cup of sweet cream. When boiling, thicken with one tablespoon of fine white wheat flour, add salt and white pepper to taste. Cook half a cauliflower in boiling salted water about 20 minutes. Cut off flowerets, using none of the stalk. Put in enough to thicken the broth.

Silver that is in constant use should be washed well daily in hot water, rinsed in cold water and polished immediately with a fresh clean towel. It will keep bright a long time with such treatment.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

Turkish Baths as Reducers

"Dear Doctor Lulu: Five years ago I was 30 pounds overweight, and had tried reducing records, rubber corsets and such, with no result except getting stouter! Then, one day, someone told me of your book—'Diet and Health, With Key to the Calories'—and oh, what a blessing it turned out to be! Had it not been for the book I should still be eating myself every time I looked in a mirror. At the same time I heard of a place where they gave good Turkish baths, and I took the exercises you advised in your book, and counted my calories most faithfully. In four months I was down to my normal weight and felt better than I had in years.

"I found this out: the sweating baths do not help unless one diets. There were a number of women taking them who were still trying to reduce after I was normal weight, simply because they would not diet.

"By counting my calories I remained at normal for four years, and then, I am ashamed to say, through carelessness I gained back 20 pounds in less than a year. So, once more, I am dieting. Have taken off 10 pounds in the last three weeks, and believe me, I'm going to keep them off this time!"

N. E. M.

Thank you, N., for letting us know your good results. I believe Turkish baths or other sweating baths are beneficial, one or twice a week, for the general health; but they will not reduce you (nor will exercise, unless enough is taken to use up excess food and some of your stored fat as well). I believe they help some to speed up the metabolism so the food burns a little more briskly, but the help is never enough to cause a reduction unless dieting is combined with them.

I love my Turkish baths and try to have one at least once a week. I go incognito and frequently hear L. H. P., and methods discussed by L. H. P. (Friendly Fat Fraternity) who are always present. Not infrequently some woman faints from staying in the hot room too long. One should never stay in after the heart begins to thump. Nor should one suffer of Bright's disease, heart disease or hardening of the arteries attend them, except on the advice of their physicians.

To get the best effect, liberal amounts of water should be drunk. The scales may not register any loss if you do this, but more perspiration is induced, and the body tissues are better flushed. (The weight that is lost is immediately gained, anyway, after drinking.)

You have shown, N., that unless the physical activities are increased, one has to continue to watch the weight. It is best never to allow a gain of more than five pounds before dieting again.

The instructions given in my book are condensed in our reducing pamphlet. See column rules for obtaining this. Better also ask for the Tummy Ten exercises.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young married woman; have been married for seven years. My husband is in bad health and, really, I think drinking caused a greater part of it. He is very selfish and never tries to make it pleasant for me.

"Sometimes I see a man in another city who seems to like me very much and insists on writing to me. I believe I love my husband more than any one, but I have so little pleasure in life I think a little is due me. Should I answer when I receive a letter?"

"He is the type of man I always admired, but then I think of my little selfish hubby and think I must go through with it. My friends say I am wasting my health and happiness. I have been told he couldn't live more than two years at best.

"Please don't think I am one to cast aside one on account of bad health. If so I wouldn't have waited this long. It's just bad nerves, I guess."

"GRETIA."

Whatever I advise, Gretia, I can see you have made up your mind to stand by your "little selfish hubby." You haven't it in you to leave him while he needs you. As to corresponding with this other man, there is no reason why you shouldn't. Even if your husband objects you can point out that he has no right to. But I doubt if you will. If the poor little man only has two years to live you will want to make those two years as happy as possible, and your own pleasure is, after all, not very important. Pleasure does not necessarily mean happiness.

And you are the type that will only be happy when you know you are doing what seems to you to be right, and it will not seem right to you to correspond with one man if you are married to another. Am I right? You are tired, I know. I can see it in your letter, but you will carry on as long as this selfish little man depends on you. Later, I hope so much, that you may have real pleasure and happiness. He may get well, you know, and then if he remains selfish and inconsiderate, you can decide whether you still love him and want to stick.

"Dear Virginia Lee: My very best girl chum has been going with a boy for over a year. She loves him with all her heart, but he doesn't like her any more and she knows it. This is just breaking her heart. He has asked me for different dates. One night I went. The next time I saw her I apologized. This she never entirely got over. Now he keeps asking for dates and I never go, just on her account.

"Lately she won't even look at me because she thinks I took him away from her. But I didn't. I don't even want him if he still loves her. I have always loved him. What am I to do?"

A difficult situation, Susan. The only thing to do is to have a frank talk with her and put the matter squarely up to her. Tell her just what you have told me. That you don't want him if she can have him, and that you are willing to step aside in that case, but that you didn't "vamp" him.

There is no use in her playing dog in the manger. She will have to be a good sport and give him up anyhow if he no longer cares for her, so why not give him up to you? Write it to her if she won't talk. It may be that you won't be able to win her back unless you give him up. In which case, the choice is up to you.

"POLLY: No need of going with 'wrong company,' whether you go away to school or stay at home, Polly. You know what is right, and you have your father, you know. He is the one to decide whether you had better go to a girls' boarding school or stay at home and go to high school. I'd prefer the latter if you were my little girl, as you can be quite a pal to your father and help make up for the loss of your mother."

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl of 16 who goes with a boy 19. I have not seen him for some time and I think he is angry at some remark I made. What would you do? Would you just wait for him? I don't want him to think I am chasing him."

"Why must boys be so queer? Do you think he is too old for me?"

"ROSITA."

If you made remarks that hurt his feelings, Rosita, apologize. He won't think you are chasing him. Boys are queer for the same reason girls are, they are made that way. No, he is not too old for you.

Peter's Adventures

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

UNDER THE WEEPING WILLOW

This time the ride was not a long one, for the distance from Buttercup to the willow tree was trifling, and Peter could have walked it in no time, as he informed Sir Butterfly when he tumbled off his back.

"This is a good time to tell me so," laughed the latter. "I was rather tired and I don't know but what I would have taken you at your word and let you walk if you had mentioned it before we started. But never mind now. Here we are, and here we shall probably stay for some time, unless you are in a hurry to go home. Are you?"

"Dear me, no," said the boy. "You don't know how much I am enjoying myself, and I want to see all that there is to be seen in your town. By the way, have you a town?"

"You haven't said a word about where you live."

"Everywhere is my home, my son," answered Sir Butterfly in a wise manner. "I live in the gardens in the meadow in the air—in fact, anywhere I happen to be is home to me. We butterflies are all like that. That is why we have so many friends among the plants and insects. We have no enemies, unless it be the birds, and forgive me for saying it, some of the humans, who hunt us with queer bags that they try to throw over our heads. (Noble means," said Peter to himself. "We are never lonely and therefore we are always happy.")

"But where do you sleep?" asked the boy. "You must have some place to go when you want to go to bed."

"Whenever night overtakes us, there we light and fold our wings and sleep soundly until dawn breaks," answered gay Sir Butterfly. "But we don't do much flying about until the sun comes out warm and strong, and then we set out to gather the honey and visit all our flower friends who welcome us with open petals. For we bring them the news of the fields and meadows as well as pollen you know."

"By the way, before I forget it, have you ever met Cousin, Moth, boy?"

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED by Phil

Who will be the outstanding star of the 1929 world series between the Chicago Cubs and the Philadelphia Athletics?

Will it be Roger Hornsby, Hack Wilson, Kiki Cuyler, Al Simmons, one of the pitchers or some obscure member of either team?

The only player on either team who has been the star of a previous world series is Cuyler, who played an outfield position for the Pittsburgh Pirates in the 1925 classic. It will be his chance to attain a feat no other player has attained.

In 1928 Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the home run twins, were the leading stars.

Hugh Fullerton, noted Columbus Dispatch writer, who watched the Wilmington College football squad practice the other day, made "Shifty" Bolen's team the subject of an article in which he praised Walter "Speed" Leonard, Xenia youth, who has apparently earned a regular berth at center on the Quaker team.

Said Fullerton: "There also is a big lad named Leonard, from Xenia, a freshman, weight 235, height six feet two, of bone and muscle, good old Southern Ohio corn buster. He looks like Leo Raskowski, only not yet filled out. Two weeks ago that lad couldn't have found a football in a bushel of beans—and today he handles himself like a coming center—selts him scouts before they forbid it."

With Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio battling at Athens and Denison playing at Wittenberg, the long-awaited battle for Buckeye Conference football supremacy will get under way October 12. Odds on the Bishops and Ohio are quoted about evenly but the Lutherans are expected to brush Denison aside easily.

Two more warm-up contests are in prospect for Miami and Cincinnati October 12. The Oxford eleven will be host to Kentucky Wesleyan and the Bearcats will play Kenyon at Cincinnati.

The extremes meet on the football field it is revealed in interesting recollections of A. M. Weyand, noted football authority.

Leo Redmon, center for Kalamazoo Normal in 1922, trained down to a paltry 295 pounds and seems to have taken the heavyweight honors from A. C. Cox, Yale's famous guard of 1884, who weighed 290.

Harry Connaughton, Georgetown's 280-pound guard in 1926, belonged in the same robust class.

The season of 1927 presented two candidates for honors on the other end of the line. P. J. Flynn, St. Bonaventure's 117-pound captain and quarterback, ran sixty yards to the touchdown that tied Ernest Cornell and Henry Hornel, a New York University halfback, dashed to three touchdowns in a game with Rutgers. The famous Walter Eckersall weighed but 118 pounds when he commenced his brilliant career.

Washington C. H. High "Blue Lions" victory over Capital High School by a margin of 21 to 0 a week ago, opened their South Central Ohio League season with a 13 to 0 victory Friday over Wilmington High, an opponent of Xenia Central later in the season. As in the Xenia game, Captain Noon and Armstrong carried the ball for long gains.

Withrow High "Tigers," of Cincinnati, which appear here against the Bucs October 18, scored an other impressive victory at the expense of Norwood, 31 to 0 Friday. Freddy Ratterman ran wild, scoring three touchdowns on runs varying from fifteen to seventy-five yards.

CAPTAIN YOWELL IS OFFENSIVE STAR IN ATTACK OF WINNERS

Brilliant Fifty Yard Touchdown Dash Is Feature

Demonstrating superiority in every department of play, an up and coming O. S. and S. O. Home football eleven registered an impressive 12 to 0 victory over Holy Angels High School of Sidney Friday afternoon on the local gridiron.

Both teams spent the first quarter in feeling each other out but in the second period Captain Bob Yowell, halfback, caught a punt and, eluding the entire visiting team, raced fifty yards for the initial touchdown.

The second touchdown came in the third quarter and was also accounted for by Captain Yowell. On a deceptive formation Yowell broke through the line for a fifteen-yard run and a score.

On several other occasions the Home team approached within striking distance of the goal but lost the ball on downs and in the fourth stanza Prof. Scott's eleven led a third touchdown because of holding which resulted in a fifteen-yard penalty.

The Home eleven recorded nineteen first downs against three or four for Sidney and appeared in much better physical condition than the visiting team, which was forced to make frequent substitutions.

The Home gridders, playing their first game since losing to Xenia Central High 7 to 0 in the season's opener, showed marked improvement both in offense and defense. Plays were run off smoothly.

Although Captain Yowell was without a doubt the offense star of the game, Collins at end, McKinley at fullback and Bolden, colored tackle, came in for their share of attention when the latter were passed around. Sidney had five letter men available in Captain Stronsider, Paul, Rice, Palmasio and Casey.

Nert Friday afternoon the Home gridders will play their first away-from-home game of the season with DeGraff High School, starting at 3 o'clock. Summary:

Substitutions: Home—Wheeler for Stevenson; Alexander for Reynolds. Home scoring, touchdowns—R. Yowell (2), Referee—P. Fuller; umpire, P. Boxwell; head linesman, L. McCoy. Time of periods—twelve minutes.

ACCUSE DAYTON MAN OF OWNING LIQUOR-MAKING APPARATUS

Charged with possessing liquor-making apparatus in connection with the discovery of a seventy-five gallon capacity still by police in a raid on the home of Aniel Bent, colored, 44 Taylor St., last August, Earl Hall, colored, Dayton, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Mayor Karl R. Babb Friday night. He is being held at Police Headquarters in default of $1,500 bond, pending a hearing assigned for next Tuesday. He was arrested by police here last Thursday.

Bent, in whose home the still was found, disclaimed ownership of the apparatus, asserting, police say, it had been placed there by Hall for the purpose of manufacturing liquor. Hall also denied ownership.

Bent was recently bound over to the grand jury on a charge similar to the one pending against Hall.

WILL BE ARRAIGNED

Alva Toner, arrested by Patrolman J. E. Craig and Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, Friday night, faced arraignment before Mayor Babb on an intoxication charge.

SPEAKS IN DAYTON

The Rev. W. H. Tilford, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church was the principal speaker at the meeting of the "Boosters Club" of the Dayton Steel Foundry Co., at the Y. M. C. A. in Dayton, Friday evening.

The Rev. Mr. Tilford's talk was on the subject of "Four Wheels of Life." A banquet preceded the talk.

QUARTET HEARD

Offering typical quartet music of the last fifty years including the more modern songs of the present generation, the Gilbert Male Quartet was well received when it appeared at the K. of P. Hall at Alpha Friday night as the first number on the Lyceum course sponsored by Beaver Creek Grange. Five numbers comprise the entertainment series.

COMPLETE PROGRAM FOR SECOND SYNOD AT CED ARVILLE CHURCH

A complete program is being announced for the annual sessions of the Second Synod of the United Presbyterian Church to be held at the Cedarville church on Tuesday, Wednesday, October 8 and 9.

The synod, which includes the western half of Ohio, most of Indiana and mission work in Tennessee and Kentucky, embraces between twenty-five and 100 congregations, which will be represented at the sessions by more than 100 delegates as well as prominent clergymen and laymen of the church of those sections who will participate in the program.

The Rev. L. L. Gray, Jamestown, retiring moderator, will preach the opening sermon when the synod convenes at 2 p. m. Tuesday. Election of a moderator and a clerk will follow. The Rev. G. L. Brown, Bellefontaine, is the present clerk.

The program for the remainder of the day includes a report of the committee on educational institutions to be given by the Rev. R. W. Frost, Findlay, O., an address by Dr. J. L. Kessler, of St. Louis, relative to the work of Xenia Theological Seminary at St. Louis and a report on the proposed basis of the merger of the Xenia Seminary with the theological seminary at Pittsburgh, Pa., given by Dr. D. L. Ferguson, Richmond, Ind. The synodical treasurer, H. H. Bodey, Dayton, will make his report also at the afternoon session.

The Rev. A. S. Work, superintendent of the mission school at Fremont, Ky., will lead the opening devotional service at 9 a. m. Wednesday. A report will be made by Dr. A. W. Jamieson, of Rushville, Ind., synodical superintendent of missions, after which there will be a conference on practical problems of pastoral work.

Other addresses on the program are to be made by Dr. J. C. Finley, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the board of administration of the United Presbyterian Church; Dr. R. A. Hutchison, Pittsburgh, secretary of the U. P. Board of American Missions; and Dr. R. W. Burnside, Dayton.

Formal organization of the Cedarville church was effected November 6, 1841 by the following charter members: Ruth R. Read, John Hume, Elizabeth Hume, James F. Stewart, Sara Jane Stewart, John Barber, Sarah Barber, David Jackson, Nancy Jackson, Robert Jackson, Minerva J. Jackson, Rachel Nichols, Thomas A. Read, Inna Townsley, Sarah Townsley, George Townsley, Margaret Townsley, William J. Gordon and Martha E. Gordon.

On July 23, 1846, the Rev. James Buchanan was installed as pastor of the congregation and he continued in that relation until his death April 11, 1847, being succeeded by his brother, the Rev. J. Hervey Buchanan, who was installed May 22, 1848 and continued as pastor until November 20, 1854.

A. Jamieson, the present pastor, assumed the church pastorate in January, 1926.

The church was built in 1847 and in 1912 was handsomely redecorated within, new oiled woodwork being added at the same time.

SUBMITS TO THIRD OPERATION ON ANKLE

John Perkins, Xenia law student, who has been a patient at the Church Hospital, Baltimore, Md., underwent an operation Thursday morning on his left ankle. Dr. William Baer, dean of Orthopedic Surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, performed the operation.

Dr. Perkins is reported to be doing nicely. The third operation he has undergone, having been operated upon twice at the Jewish Hospital in Cincinnati. He will not be able to resume his studies at the University of Dayton, this year.

Mr. Perkins' sister, Mrs. Esther Morgan, Dayton, is with him at the hospital.

MINISTERS ATTEND SPRINGFIELD MEET

Fifty Presbyterian ministers attended a meeting in Springfield Thursday in the interests of the Ohio Synod Fellowship Week, one of several such meetings held at the same time throughout the state.

Ministers from the Dayton, Marion and Cincinnati Presbyteries, including Xenia and Greene County ministers, were in attendance. The Rev. Harry Barr, Urbana, was the speaker at the morning session and the Rev. W. H. Small, Cincinnati and the Rev. Charles Ryan Adams, Springfield, were on the afternoon program.

CAPITAL-BLUFFON GAME IS SCORELESS

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 5.—A scoreless tie was the ultimate end of the fray between Capital University and Bluffton College in Capital's season opener here yesterday and today both teams can sit back and watch someone else make repairs after the final gun has cracked.

Although the score gave an indication of two well balanced teams such was not the case, as Bluffton would or should have won handily had not some fumbles proven costly to it, especially in the last quarter.

Mohr and Diller, were easily the outstanding players for Bluffton.

Bowling Scores.

The Downtown Country Club took undisputed possession of first place in the City Bowling League by winning three straight games from the Flexmode Shoes in the first half of a league double-header Friday night. In the first match Frame led the Downtowns with a series of 586 while Dudley rolled 469 for the losers. Hurley with a total of 496 led the Legion and H. Jordan turned in a 511 series for Fullers.

UNDERSTANDING IS PURPOSE OF COMING TO UNITED STATES

It will not be entirely international relationships.

Before the prime minister leaves for a week end isolation in the wilderness he will complete his formal social duties in the capital.

In the morning, MacDonald will call upon the vice president, the chief justice and the speaker of the house. He will be accompanied by Sir Esme Howard, ambassador of Great Britain.

The prime minister will also make a courtesy call on Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson at the department of state. Following a lunch at the British embassy, he will go to the White House as a guest for the remainder of his stay in Washington.

In addition to the colorful pomp and ceremony attached to the formalities, Washington contributed a new sensation to the prime minister in the activities of the newspaper cameramen.

When the premier left the White House after calling on President Hoover, flareslights made a miniature Coney Island of the lawn and speed-lash powder detonated like the nineteen-gun salute he received when coming up New York Harbor.

As a particularly large charge exploded, the lens of one camera popped off and was hurled at the feet of the prime minister. Several secret service men jumped instinctively.

Isabel also had had her first thrill. Her automobile became separated from the procession between the White House and the British embassy and swerved in and out of traffic in an effort to catch up. Several times collisions with other machines were narrowly averted.

CHATTY

BEATRICE BURTON, Author of

"HER MAN," "MONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," etc.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

CHAPTER XLVII

"I did—once. Then I found out the truth; I haven't believed in you since," he answered. Chatty was too stirred to see the trouble in his eyes.

She sat with her eyes cast down, thinking, thinking.

She couldn't make open love to the man; tell him she was sick at heart for him, that if he didn't come back to her she'd—she didn't know what would happen.

But she had to say something. An opportunity like this might not come again! The bank was closed, and yet David made no move to go.

"But Dave," she ventured at last. "Don't you see? I want you to believe in me again! I'm trying—trying so hard to be—to be what you—what everyone wants me to be!"

David gulped, got up, and walked up and down the room.

Chatty's heart leaped. He, too, was stirred, then! He wasn't going to be just impersonal and cold!

"I'd like to believe in you," he said at last, resting himself. "It hurt—what you did."

"You mean—about Agnes?" Chatty's face flamed.

David nodded. "That—and other things. But you can't force belief. You can't say 'I believe' and make yourself do it. No one can. You believe or you don't believe—you love or you don't love—not according to what you want, but because you must. Don't you know that?"

Chatty did know it. She could no more help loving and wanting Dave than she could help breathing. Was belief, then, really like that? Something that you couldn't get by asking for it?

"Tell me some more about yourself," suggested Dave. "What do you do with yourself, evenings? How do you pass your time? Are you happy?"

Chatty relaxed. This was like old times—a real, friendly chat with Dave! He wanted her to talk to him. He had said she was "enormously attractive!" He had walked the floor. He wanted to believe in her! Surely, with so much in her favor, she would win him the rest of the way.

How to do it? How to make herself appear attractive, good, sweet in his eyes?

Chatty's thoughts were like lightning flashes, so fast and furiously did they come. David didn't like wild parties. He didn't drink. He liked bridge and Billie and George and quiet amusements. Better not tell him about Bryant and Winnie and Jim, then—

"Oh, I spend a lot of time with Billie. When she's not too busy with George, that is," she amended, hurriedly. "And I stay home a lot, too. Dad—Dad rather needs me. He—he has been trying very hard to—to get a sewing-machine for mother. And I'm helping him."

Chatty tried not to blush. She hadn't helped him at all. But she was going to! "I'll give him some money tonight, so that won't be a fib!" thought Chatty.

"And—who takes you riding now, on picnics—and rides?" David repeated himself lamely.

Chatty trembled with delight, inwardly. He remembered! He was jealous!

"No one takes me riding!" she asserted. "I—I don't care to go riding with anyone, since—since—" Chatty stopped.

But what was this? David, with a cold stern look on his face; David, as chilly in manner as if she was a stranger—

"You will excuse me now, Miss Chatterton," he said, icily. "I am very busy!"

"Why, Dave! Why—what did I say? What have I done? What—" David stopped in front of her, and his eyes blazed into hers with a passion that frightened her. Gone the coldness, gone the reserve, gone the impersonality that had chilled her; this was the David she loved, and yet a David strange and terrible.

"You lied!" he accused. "Three times within a month have I seen you with Bryant Dunning in his car. Twice with his arms around you, and as late as last night! I passed you on the road!"

Chatty remembered the car with the bright lights, for which they had to wait to start petting.

"I have heard of the parties at White's, and the expeditions to Lollypop Inn," David stormed on. "You can't talk of those, Miss Chatterton, and not be talked about! But I don't listen to gossip; I merely believe my eyes, not my ears!"

Chatty's face flamed, hot, moist, in terrible shame.

"Believe in you? Believe in you?" David laughed, a nasty laugh, a laugh all scorn and contempt. "I did believe in you—I believed in you as a man believes in a holy thing in life! And you were not what I thought! You were a liar and a cheat, a thief and a trouble maker, a gossip and a slanderer! You tore my heart in two and now you come here with a pack of falsehoods and want to do it again! Well, you can't! I don't believe in you! I never will believe in you! I hope I never, never see your pretty face, with its false eyes and its snake's tongue, again!"

And David flung out of the office and disappeared, leaving Chatty to pick up her shattered dream and creep from the office and the bank as best she could.

Chatty did not go back to the office that afternoon. She went home, to lock herself in her room and cry—cry as if her heart would break.

It was really all over.

He hated her. And the worst of it was, she had brought it on herself by lying to him. His question had been a test. And she had not measured up. It wasn't fair to test a girl like that! What harm was there in riding with Bryant Dunning and letting him kiss her? Probably he had that girl with him when he passed them, parked. Doubtless he kissed and hugged her, the nasty cat! Had she asked him a single question? Not one!

The more Chatty thought of it, the angrier she got. She didn't know that the modern psychologist has discovered that the angrier we get at people, the more we show, often times, how wrong we are ourselves; that we get angry with others to restore our own waning respect for ourselves.

Chatty was all wrong.

To pretend to herself that David was wrong and she right, was the only way in which she could support her own thoughts of herself.

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it, Mr. David Jordan, you can just go plumb to!" declared Chatty, passionately. "If I'm going to have the name, I might as well have the game! I've been good. I've tried, I've kept from repeating innocent gossip! Much good it did me! From now on—watch out!"

Just what harm it would do David for Chatty to gossip about her friends she didn't reason out. It was just a protest.

"And I'll go with Bryant Dunning all I please, so there! And he can kiss me all he pleases—and—I'll go tonight!"

No sooner said than done. Out of the apartment to the drug store, a nickel in the slot, Bryant Dunning on the phone—

"Bryant? I need you! Seventy-three, sharp. And I don't want any friends along, either. Just us two, Bryant, dear. We're going to the Lollypop and dance—and raise whoopee!"

The Theater

The famous musical comedy success "Rio Rita" will open the Victory Theater, Dayton, for the fall semester, according to information coming from Elmer Redelle, manager. The musical show will begin its engagement Thursday, October 10 and continue through Saturday with a matinee on the final day.

"Rio Rita" is a Ziegfeld show, but Ziegfeld, with his fingers burnt on expensive road production, is not sponsoring its present tour. Instead Ziggy sold the road rights to George Wintz, the erstwhile Dayton plumbing salesman, who is running the show.

The leading roles are sung by Arthur Rogers, last seen as lead- ing tenor of "My Maryland" and Marybeth Conolly, from "The Vaga-

W. J. Burns needs no introduction as America's super-sleuth. Less known is the fact that a famous case which he solved was the basis for the Harriet Ford-Harvey J. O'Higgins story, "The Argyle Case." Thomas Meighan stars in the Warner Bros. Vitaphone screen adaptation "bond king". The music is the same of course, and the scenes and many of the chorus girls are said to be beautiful.

We reported yesterday that Lillian Gish, recently returned from Europe, is hurrying to Hollywood in the belief that the talkies hold much for her future.

Now comes word from United Artists that she will be starred in "The Swan", a screen story adapted from Ferenc Molnar's modern romantic comedy of the same name. The company will go into production about October 20 and Miss Gish's supporting cast will include Rod La Rocque, Conrad Nagel and Marie Dressler. Melville Baker, who did the story for the screen, is the man who translated and adapted Molnar's play from the Hungarian when it was produced in New York a few years ago. His grandfather, George M. Baker, wrote more than seventy plays that were big hits in their day and his father, Robert M. Baker, contributed such successes as "Beverly of Graustark", "Arms and the Girl" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

An exhaustive research into the life of Abraham Lincoln convinces D. W. Griffith that the martyred President is a more complex character than any of the thousands of villains and heroes he has portrayed on the screen during his twenty-two years of experience. Griffith is preparing a talkie epic around Lincoln's career and discovered that Lincoln never drank liquor, though he never censured those who did. On one occasion a committee of temperance workers pleaded with him to dismiss Ulysses Grant because the general was drunk when he won the battle of Shiloh. Lincoln smiled and said: "I'd like to get more of the same brand for some of my other generals."

INVITED TO SPEAK

An invitation has been extended to C. McCoy Franklin, president of the noted school for Mountain Highlanders at Crossmore, N. C., to deliver an address at a union service at Cedarville College October 13. President Franklin gave a number of addresses last year in Cincinnati and other Ohio cities as well as adjacent states and everywhere was received with enthusiasm.

Though he was deeply religious, Lincoln visited a voodoo woman and laughed when she told him he was destined to be a President of the United States. On his wedding day the great President fled to the woods in a panic of embarrassment when a party of searchers discovered him wet with the perspiration of shy fear.

BLAMED IN $10,000 SUIT HERE

A defective steering gear is held responsible for an auto accident which cost the life of John T. Noble, 64, Pleasant View, W. Va., August 19, 1928, in a suit demanding $10,000 damages from The Lang Chevrolet Co., Xenia, filed in Common Pleas Court by Mrs. Nannie J. Noble, widow of the decedent and administratrix of her husband's estate.

Noble, the petition sets forth, was riding in a coupe owned and driven by his son, H. E. Noble, from Pleasant View to Point Pleasant and the accident occurred at a point near the latter city.

By reason of an alleged defect in the steering apparatus, the coupe upset, injuring the elder Noble fatally. He died from a fractured skull two or three days afterward. It is alleged in the petition that the car was purchased from the Lang Chevrolet Co., thirty days prior to the accident and that when the machine was delivered the company represented that it had been overhauled and was in first class condition.

It was discovered at the time of the accident that the defendant had apparently neglected to examine the steering apparatus and that the steering rod had become worn and was loose, the petition asserts.

According to the petition, the decedent was 64 years of age, had an earning capacity of $3,000 a year and was in round health. He is survived by his widow, also 64 years of age and wholly dependent upon him, and ten children, all of whom are grown, the petition declares.

Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

PAIR GIVEN FINES
RESULT OF BATTLE WITH AUTHORITIES

As a sequel to an encounter with Sheriff Ohmer Tate and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, on the Dayton Pike late Thursday night, M. O. Devers, home at large, truck driver, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to five days in the county jail by Probate Judge S. C. Wright Friday for resisting an officer. He pleaded guilty.

Devers also paid a fine of $5 and costs assessed when he entered a guilty plea to operating a truck which bore no tail light.

William Hopping, Dayton, arrested at the same time by the two officers after he had driven an auto into a ditch, pleaded guilty to driving an auto while intoxicated and received a fine of $200 and costs and a thirty-day jail sentence when arraigned before Judge Wright. His driving rights were not suspended, however.

Sheriff Tate and his deputy were investigating Hopping's accident when Devers drove past. Observing that the truck was without a rear light, the officers stopped him and handed him a citation to appear in court.

Although partly paralyzed and a cripple, Devers resisted arrest and was only subdued after a hand-to-hand struggle in which the officers finally emerged victorious.

These wives of ours!

WE took them from the shelter of their families, gave them two or three rooms and a share of our salary—then left them sitting there among the wedding presents, a bit bewildered.

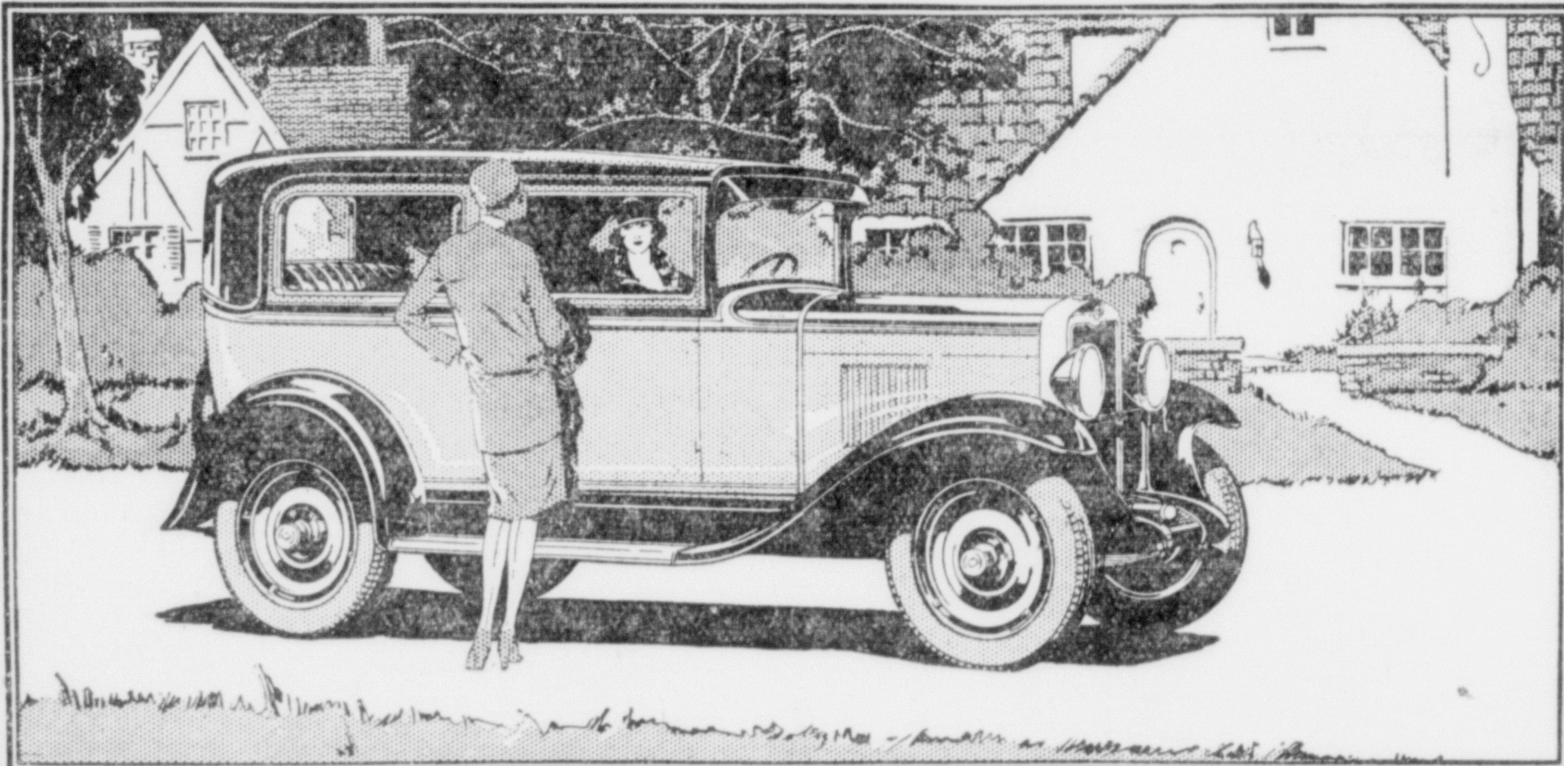

But they knew how—these wives of ours. They knew how to make rooms into homes, and how to get more merchandise out of a dollar bill than we ever could. We're lucky to have wives. How do they do it?

Look through this paper, day after day. You will find advertisements covering almost every human need. They are filled with hints for the household, hints for health, hints for clothing, hints for keeping young. They are virtually little essays on life. No wonder these wives of ours follow them so carefully. As one wise wife said: "It isn't so much that I know housekeeping so well. I know where to learn it!"

Most advertising is prepared especially for women. Read it. It forms an authoritative text - book on good housekeeping.
